What's behind flight of students from the Carmel public schools

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(First in a series)

AT JUNIPERO SERRA School, a still-nursing mother approached Sister Geraldine to get her son placed on the waiting list for enrollment in the private Catholic School at Carmel Mission.

In 1982 the private non-denominational Briarcliff Academy opened its doors at the site once occupied by the now-closed Carmel Woods School. In one year, enrollment and programs at Briarcliff Academy doubled.

Private kindergarten through eighth grade schools are a booming business and their newest customers are the increasing numbers of parents who have lost faith in the Carmel Unified School District.

It is a sad statement, but one that is based on fact.

While enrollment in the public schools continues to decline at an alarming rate, private schools have been forced to turn away parents of children in several grade levels, most predominately kindergarten and first graders.

Nearly one out of every three elementary-age students who now attend either Briarcliff, Junipero Serra, All Saints' Episcopal Day or Santa Catalina Schools lives within the Carmel Unified School District boundaries.

And while the Carmel schools face budget cutbacks and elimination of entire programs, the private schools flourish with added emphasis on the so-called extras — the arts, foreign languages and field trips.

A decade ago, it was labeled "white flight" as those who could afford it, and even some who could not, fled the blacks and inner cities for suburbia and better schools.

Today it is more of "brain flight" or

"green flight" to private schools as affluent parents flee what they perceive as mediocre public schools beset by teacher burn-out, crowded classrooms, a lack of discipline and embarrassingly-low test scores.

The indictment of Carmel public schools is not entirely justified. Carmel at one time had a reputation as one of the best public school systems in the state. And after a period of decline in both quality and esteem, the schools appear to be on the rebound.

But progress is slow and it will take some doing for the district to climb back to its position of esteem, trust and success that a well-educated, affluent Carmel adult public expects from its schools.

Meanwhile, more and more middle and lower class parents have opted to work overtime and sacrifice luxuries to guarantee that Johnny will get a good education beyond the three R's.

THE GENERAL public cannot understand why the public schools have failed and only now are beginning to show an increase in test scores, achievement levels and productivity.

After all, Carmel is a lily-white, affluent school district with 95 percent of its students Caucasian. It does not have the disadvantages of poor schools in the inner cities filled with the children of poverty, crime and social unrest.

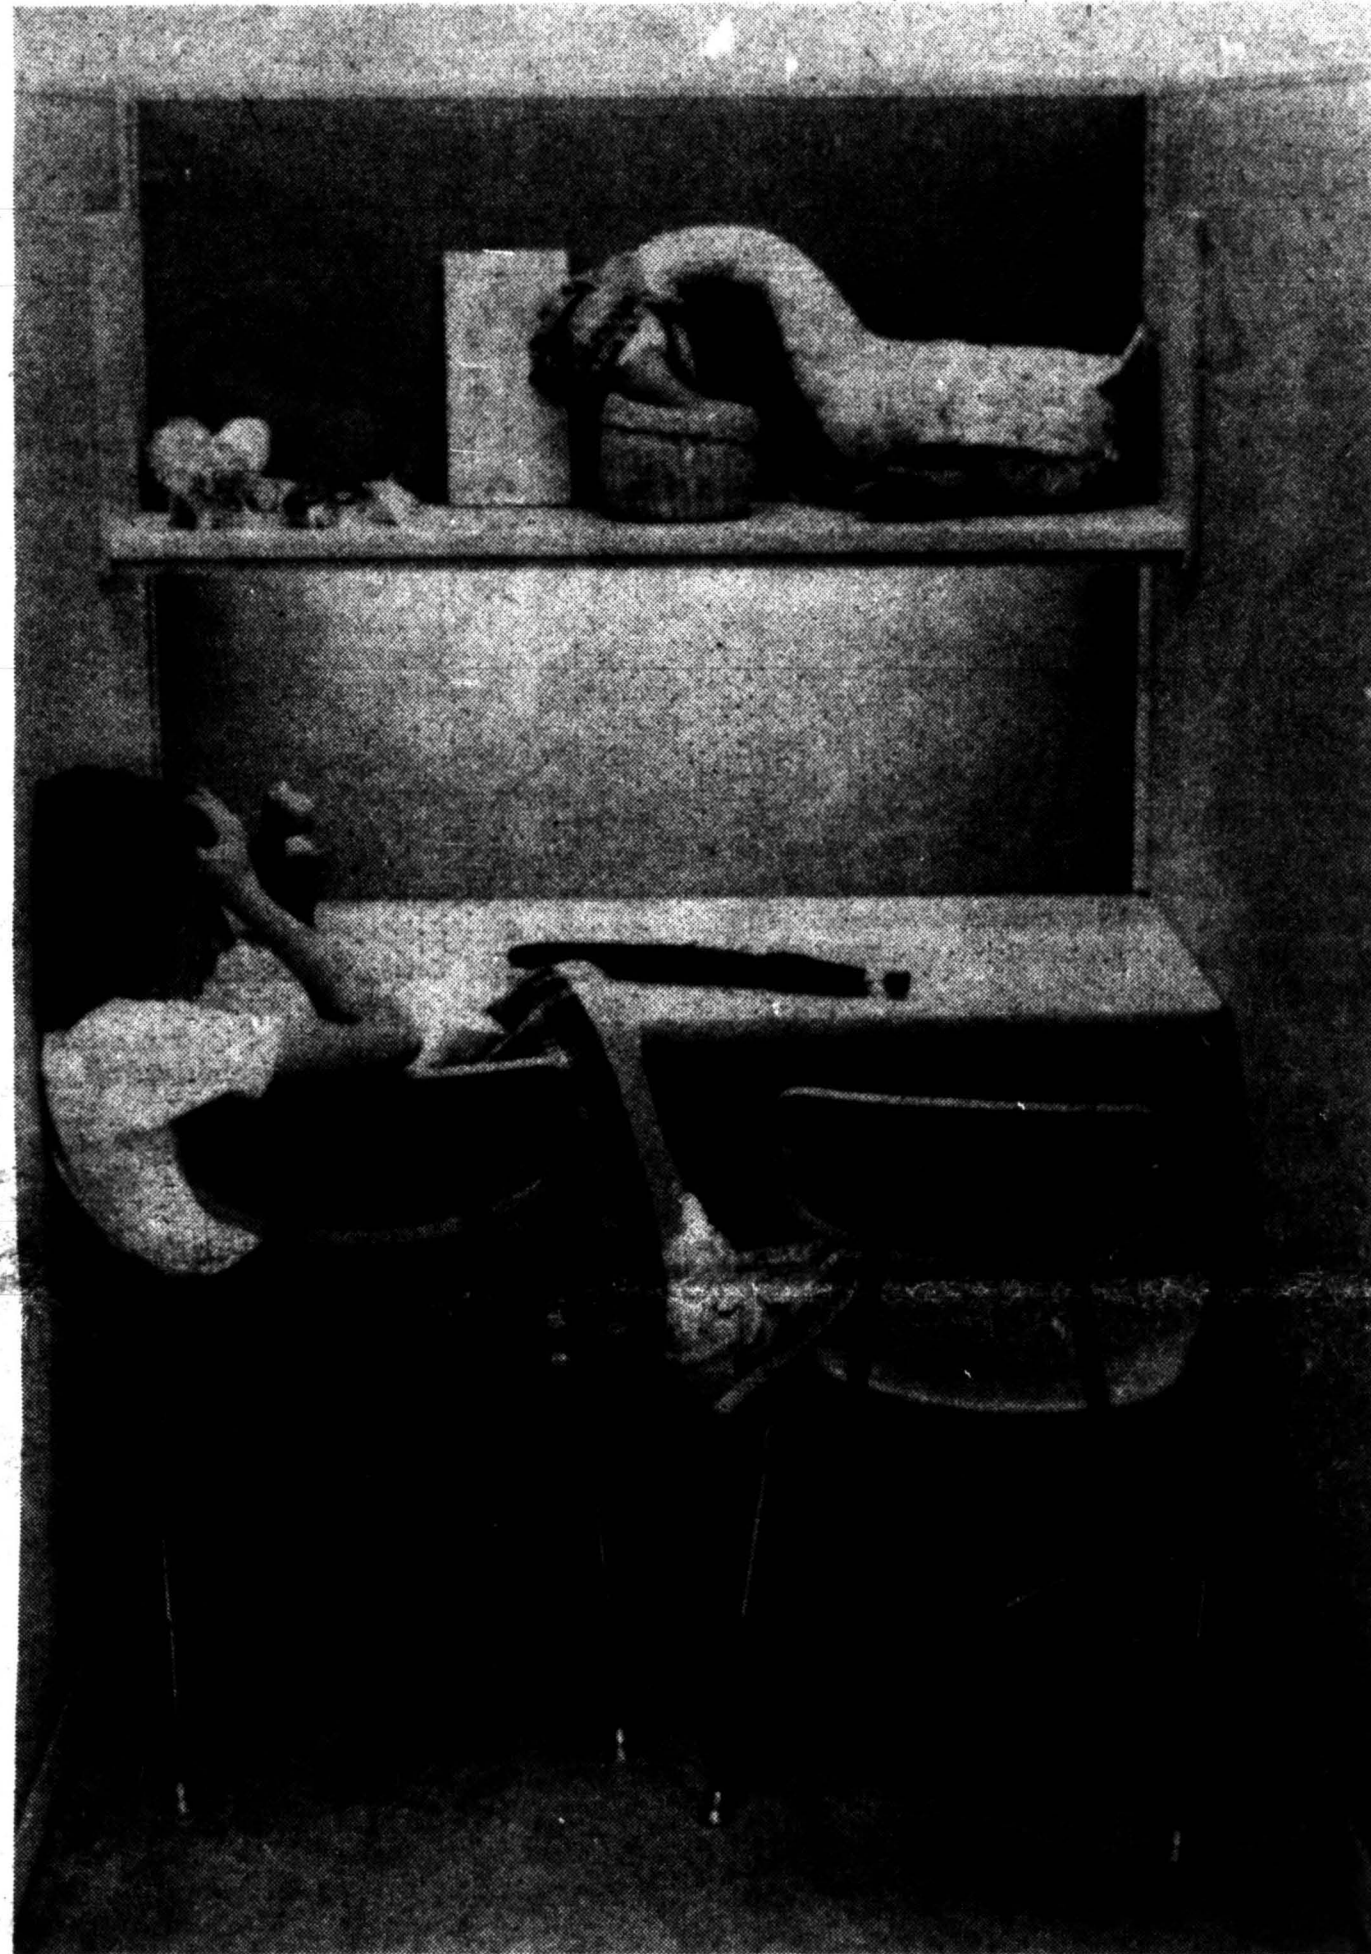

Carmel perhaps is the second most affluent community in the area, trailing only Pebble Beach in property values, median income and disposable income, according to census information.

But there are other far more complex reasons for the flight to private schools than the fact that parents choose private schools because they have more money.

Private schools are better able to select their students, can discipline more easily, and their hands are not tied by a maze of bureaucratic rules and regulations that drive public school teachers and administrators into a daily frenzy.

And historically, private schools have been able to enjoy luxuries that public schools can only dream of.

Private schools are able to be very selective about their students. If the child is not meeting academic standards or is a discipline problem, out he goes. At the public schools, the welcome mat has to be put out for everyone.

Because they can limit enrollment, private schools are able to keep low teacher/student ratios by choice, rather than by accident.

Additionally, private schools can more readily fire teachers. Like the student, if the instructor is not doing his job, it's out on the street. In the public schools, tenure is thought by many to be a shield for incompetence.

There also is the matter of budgets. Although many of the religious schools have to pinch pennies, generally speaking the private school is much more affluent than its public counterpart.

For instance, Briarcliff Academy in Carmel has a budget of roughly $500,000 for its approximately 120 students. By comparison, the public Carmel River Elementary School has approximately the same budget to be spread among about 365 students.

These facts in the past have been a fine defense at school board meetings. But today

Challis deserves praise

Dear Editor:

In the article depicting the 100th win for Carmel High's swimming girls, no mention was made of the young man who has been instrumental in training and developing our expert female swimmers.

During 1983, over 220 females and males ages five to 18 participated in swim programs at Pacific Grove High, Carmel High, and the Carmel Valley pool. The Carmel Barracudas swim 12 months a year, most in double workouts at 5:45 a.m. to 7:45 a.m. and two hours in the evening.

At least half of the high school boys' and girls' swim teams either swim with or have swum with the Barracudas, which includes divers and water polo teams.

Since 1970, Larry Challis has spent much of his time coaching Barracudas, both as assistant and then as head coach. For the past 13 years, local swimmers have set higher standards and have learned the technique and excitement of swimming the right way.

This community is excited about the girls' 100th win but Larry Challis, who is there before the run rises and after it sets, I believe also deserves recognition for a job beautifully done.

Scaled-down Piccadilly

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank those persons who voted to retain Piccadilly Park. It was a hard fight and our opponents presented some valid arguments for their viewpoint.

Now that the decision has been made, Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club would like to offer its services to the city in helping to develop a scaled-down park.

It might be useful for residents to give their views to the city council and city administrator on what form the park should take.

Finally, our group would like to say a word of special thanks to Michael Gardner of the Pine Cone for his objective and fair reporting of the issues during the campaign. It was no easy task, but he did his job admirably.

Birthday a success

Dear Editor:

Oct. 31 certainly was a wonderful day, one which will be long remembered and no small part of it belongs to the press coverage you so kindly provided prior to the event. Without such special help, the birthday celebration would not have been such a huge success. Enthusiastic compliments are still being received, many expressing hopes that the Halloween parade and party might become another Carmel-by-the-Sea tradition.

Perhaps you might like to do another good work for us. There are many "unsung heroes" of the cookie/cake/refreshments brigade who came quietly upon the scene to leave their goodies for the enjoyment of the community. We are, indeed, most grateful for their thoughtfulness.

We'd like to write to each one individually but since there were so many donors, we feel that we might miss someone. If you could be our "printed emissary" to extend our thanks to all, I would be most appreciative.

And may I extend grateful thanks to you on behalf of myself, our city administrator and the city staff. Your generosity of time in helping to publicize this event helped to make this a most memorable day.

Withdraw from U.N.

Dear Editor:

These are the words spoken to the Lenin School of Political Warfare in Moscow some years ago by Dimetry Manuilsky, who also presided over the United Nations Security Council:

"War to the hilt between communism and capitalism is inevitable. Today, of course, we are not strong enough to attack. Our time will come in 20 or 30 years. To win we shall need the element of surprise. The bourgeoisie will have to be put to sleep. So we shall begin by launching the most spectacular peace movement on record. There will be electrifying overtures and unheard of concessions. The capitalistic countries, stupid and decadent, will rejoice to cooperate in their own destruction. They will leap at another chance to be friends. As soon as their guard is down, we shall smash them with our clenched fists."

The United Nations serves as the major communist espionage base in this country, and all such agents have complete immunity from arrest.

The U.N. restrictions and controls were responsible for the havoc and horror of such "no-win" wars as Korea and Vietnam.

The U.N. is shielding the massive narcotics distributions of its member Communist China.

The U.N. is, in effect, promoting complete disarmament of western nations under a so-called UN "Peace Force."

The U.N. is the formal structure for a world government that would mean the abandonment of American sovereignty, and the creation of a world-wide police state.

The U.S. pays most of the costs for this insolent, communist-controlled organization. Isn't it past time we withdrew from the U.N.?

Reagan violates promise

Dear Editor:

In the case of Baby Jane Doe, doctors have said that with surgery, this badly-deformed infant could possibly live for 20 years, although severely retarded and bed-ridden.

Is it any wonder the parents decided to forgo surgery after consulting with neurosurgeons, social workers and clergymen?

The Reagan administration, bowing to the wishes of the pro-lifers, is going to court to "protect the civil rights" of an infant with birth defects.

Surely, the parents have the right to choose what quality of life they want for their child.

Remember Reagan saying he wanted to get the government "off our backs?"

All a mistake?

Dear Editor:

I wonder if Bob Stephenson realizes that the same misinformed and over-emotional people who cast their ballots Nov. 8 to keep the library where it is and not sell Piccadilly Park are the same people who voted him into office. A mistake on all counts?

Council took positive step in legalizing second kitchens

By ROBERT MISKIMON

AT LAST, some common sense seems to have appeared on the scene with respect to the long-controversial second kitchen issue in Carmel.

In a joint study session with the planning commission, the city council has voted to give conceptual approval to a scheme to legalize the 250 to 300 so-called second kitchens in the village.

After years of controversy and little or no forward motion toward resolution of this issue, city officials have taken a reasonable step toward not only more coherent city planning policies but also toward provision of affordable housing.

The council voted to approve in concept legalization of the second kitchens — including small attached rooms or detached converted garages with stove, sink and refrigerator — as part of the housing element of the revised 1973 Carmel General Plan.

Once criteria for regulation of those units are developed, only those existing second kitchens which conform to those criteria will be permitted.

The intent of the council clearly was to gain a measure of control over the units which do not exist now—not to encourage increased density in residential areas of the city. The fact that there are so many second kitchens now demand some form of official acknowledgement as a means to better control. This is what legalization would provide.

The city council and planning commission, as part of the legalization procedure, would not only be able to set standards of health, safety and welfare for second kitchens, but also would be able to rely on the city's right to inspection to enforce its regulations.

As a practical matter, the second kitchens have provided a low-cost alternative to conventional and expensive housing in Carmel, and have been mentioned by state and regional planning bodies as the most logical source of affordable housing.

In legalizing second kitchens, the city will gain a measure of control it does not now possess.

The situation is roughly analogous to that of prostitution in Europe, where the world's oldest profession has been regulated through legalization and licensing. The first step to this kind of control is a realistic acknowledgement that the situation probably won't change by itself.

The Carmel City Council has taken that step and has moved closer to realistic and meaningful controls over long-bothersome second kitchens.

Don't amend ERA

Dear Editor:

The Equal Rights Amendment reintroduced last January in the House by 215 co-sponsors from both parties, our Leon Panetta among them, is due to come to a House floor vote in the next weeks. But it is expected that the opposition will press for a list of crippling amendments and try to persuade even co-sponsors — of which there are now 245 — to agree to these.

The League of Women Voters and the other many endorsing groups are united in support of what unamended ERA which is a meaningful ERA, one which will diminish the extent to which anti-discrimination laws can be eroded or ignored and will attack some of the causes of the current "feminization of poverty."

Now is the time for all those who believe that equal rights for men and women should be assured by the Constitution to let members of Congress know of their wish for an unamended ERA.

Get it together

Dear Editor:

The work being done on Carmel Valley Road is moving at a snail's pace. I drive the road every day and until they finally paved the section in front of Wolter's Market, it looked like all they did was move the same dirt around each day. I greatly detest the fact of having dust and mud caked on my car all the time. I wish whoever is responsible would get their act together.

Point Lobos story

Dear Editor:

Thank you for your story on the 50th Anniversary of Point Lobos. Our invited guests and public visitors had an enjoyable weekend at the reserve.

The article was interesting, informative, and generated a lot of enthusiasm for the birthday celebration. We were especially pleased with your coverage of the cultural history of Point Lobos, and hope the future opening of the Whaler's Cottage will encourage public interest in the park's history.

We appreciate the special attention you gave to this event. Please contact us if we can help you with any articles in the future.

Council approves second kitchens

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A RELUCTANT Carmel City Council — after decades of bickering over fears of speculation, increased density and the erosion of the single family residential neighborhoods — has relented and eventually will legalize the low-cost housing units known as "second kitchens."

The council in a special Nov. 10 study session with the planning commission approved "in concept" the legalization of second kitchens. Councilman Robert Stephenson was the only dissenter.

However, that approval is granted to only existing illegal second kitchens, which will be restricted by a myriad of controls still to be developed by the planning staff.

Actual legalization will not come until those controls are adopted by the council sometime in early 1984.

The council tentatively plans to open a "grace or window period" where operators of existing illegal second kitchens may apply for a use permit. After a period of time, that "window" will close and no other second kitchens will be allowed.

Applicants also will have to prove that they now have a second kitchen unit. The council will not accept applications for new second kitchen units.

After that "window" period expires, the new code enforcement officer is expected to sweep through the town and close those that do not have a use permit.

Robert Griggs, director of the Community Planning and Building Department, estimates that there are between 250 and 300 second kitchens in town.

A second kitchen usually is defined as a small attached room or detached converted garage that has a stove, sink and refrigerator.

During the study session, graduate planning intern Brian Roseth posed a series of policy questions to the council that would have to be answered before the planning staff could proceed with development of the housing element for the proposed revised 1973 Carmel General Plan.

Obviously, Roseth told the council, the staff should not spend time developing controls on second kitchens unless the council first decides once and for all whether the units should be legalized.

A reluctant council gave concept approval to legalization of second kitchens reasoning that it is better to have controls on those that exist than just keeping the units "underground."

ADDITIONALLY, the council realized that legalization probably would not add to the density, parking and speculation problems because so many second kitchens already exist. Only by allowing new develop-

HOUSING IS a major issue in Carmel these days as rents climb right along with the property values. Not everyone can afford new apartments or condominiums, such as "The Chimneys" project (above) at the southwest corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues. To help provide some low-cost housing, the council has granted concept approval to second kitchens.

ment of second kitchens would those problems increase, the council reasoned.

"I don't believe we should allow any more development in the R-1 (single family residential) district," said Councilman David Maradei.

"But I don't see how we're going to abate an 80-year-old woman from her second kitchen. I don't see how we could survive as a council if we did that," said Maradei, who opposes second kitchens but feels that a compromise can be worked out by strict control of existing units.

"It is to control something that is uncontrollable right now," he pointed out.

Maradei believes eventual restrictions may eliminate all second kitchens anyway.

"It's going to control it so tightly, it's going to eliminate it," he said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold too is concerned about density increases, parking problems and speculation. However, she admits the council cannot completely close down the second kitchens.

"I don't think we have any choice or we would be forcing people out on the streets," Mrs. Arnold said.

Mrs. Arnold said "in theory" it would be ideal to abate all second kitchens. However, she cannot bring herself to remove people from their homes.

"In theory, yes, we should abate all of them. In practice it just won't work. Personally, I'm very opposed to it (second kitchens)," she said.

Mrs. Arnold then moved to legalize only existing second kitchens that will meet city requirements to be developed later. Her motion was supported by Maradei, Mayor Charlotte Townsend and James Wright.

But Councilman Robert Stephenson opposed legalization.

"This is legalizing illegal units and creating duplexes and we should maintain the R-1," Stephenson said as he voiced opposition to allowing second kitchens.

Because of the high property values, landlords will be likely to create duplexes to meet the monthly mortgage payment or merely to add to their profits, Stephenson fears.

And because of high rents, tenants already are forced to share homes with others in order to afford to pay the rent. Allowing the addition of second kitchens will only encourage house sharing by families, Stephenson believes.

"This is a single-family town," he noted.

FRANCES HUFF of Carmel questioned how the city plans to enforce its regulations on second kitchens.

"How are you guys going to enforce it? Are you going to have search warrants? Are you going to have neighbors telling on neighbors?" she asked.

"I think you have a nest of worms here. They'll just go underground again. If they're not humane laws, they won't be obeyed."

Her husband, Darrell, told the council the restrictions will not work economically. He said the more restrictions are placed, the more it will cost landlords and then the rents will be raised.

"I think you should look for specific abuse problems," Huff said. "The kitchen itself really isn't doing any harm."

The council responded by saying the city has the right of inspection. If the city learns that a second kitchen operates illegally, the code enforcement officer can inspect the house.

In addition, when a house is sold the city now inspects the premises for health and safety code violations. That also is the time to ensure that a second kitchen is not on the property, the council said.

After the council adopted in concept the legalization of second kitchens, it tackled what kinds of controls should be placed on the smaller units.

No specifics were approved and staff is to present another report to the council in early 1984.

The council "definitely" wants the property to be owner-occupied to reduce the possibility of speculation by "out-of-towners."

To obtain a use permit for a second kitchen, the owner either could live in the main house or in the smaller unit. However, a maximum of two people would be allowed to reside in the second kitchen, the council said.

Parking restrictions generated concern among the council members.

The council is concerned that a requirement for an off-street parking space would eliminate many second kitchens now occupied by elderly residents who do not even own a vehicle.

However, the council too is concerned about the increasing number of cars parked along residential streets.

The council decided not to include a parking restriction because it would be "unenforceable."

Another thorny question raised is rent control.

At the suggestion of Maradei, the council directed staff to investigate possible ways to keep second kitchen rents low, such as rent control or a city subsidy program.

"That really does bring low-income housing in the community," Maradei said.

Maradei suggested that tenants could report landlords who charge unfair rents.

"Where would you be the next day?" asked planning commission chairwoman Sandy Swain in suggesting that landlords would merely boot out a tenant that complains about the rent.

The council also directed staff to prepare a recommendation on how much of a fee the city should charge applicants for a use permit to operate a second kitchen.

The current use permit fee is $50, but planning and building director Robert Griggs said that charge does not cover the staff costs of issuing the permit.

The council also told staff that it does not want a program where the city would financially assist landlords to remodel second kitchens that do not meet current health and safety codes.

Carmel mayoral candidates play a waiting game

By MICHAEL GARDNER

POTENTIAL CARMEL mayoral candidates in the April 1984 election appear to be playing a waiting game to see who will throw the hat into the ring first.

Councilman Robert Stephenson — who is in his second year of a four-year term — during the Nov. 1 council meeting sidestepped an opportunity to be the first announced mayoral candidate.

In response to Stephenson's recent appointment as Mayor Pro Tempore (he replaces the late Frank Lloyd), Councilwoman Helen Arnold suggested that the former chairman of the planning commission would make an excellent mayor.

Mrs. Arnold said she has "nothing but kind words" for Stephenson and there is "no candidate that I would be more glad to support."

Mrs. Arnold was absent when Stephenson was appointed Oct. 18 as Mayor Pro Tempore. She made her comments during a discussion of the minutes of the Oct. 18 session.

Stephenson did not comment on Mrs. Arnold's Nov. 1 statements, but the next morning he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that he has not considered running for the post now held by Mayor Charlotte Townsend.

In fact, Stephenson wants Mayor Townsend to seek re-election.

"No, I have not considered it. We've got a good mayor," said Stephenson, who was elected to the council in 1982 and is not up for re-election until 1986.

"I'd like to see Charlotte run again. I would encourage her to run again. She's doing a good job and I think she should stay there," he said.

But Mayor Townsend is not all that certain that she wants to serve another term. And the mayor responds in kind by saying she thinks Stephenson would make a fine mayor.

"I haven't decided. I think Bob would make an excellent mayor," she said. "(My decision) will have a great deal to do with who else runs."

Former Mayor Barney Laiolo, who was defeated by Mayor Townsend in the 1982 election, also is waiting to see who else wants the seat before making a decision.

"I haven't given it much thought at this time. A lot depends on who's going to throw their hat into the ring. At this point I have no pluses or minuses about running. I'm just watching," said Laiolo, who was a council-appointed mayor from 1968 to 1972 and was elected by the voters for the two-year 1980 to 1982 term.

Laiolo was elected to the council in 1972 but was not re-appointed as mayor. He then resigned in 1973.

FORMER MAYOR Gunnar Norberg, who served from 1976 to 1980 but was defeated by Mayor Townsend in 1982, said he has no plans at this time to try again for the post.

"No, I wasn't thinking about it. Then again, I hardly ever think about it. I don't have anything like that in mind," said Norberg, who also served on the city council from 1958 to 1962, from 1964 to 1968 and from 1972 to 1976.

Councilman David Maradei, who is in the middle of a four-year term, has said he does not plan to run for mayor.

The other two council members — Mrs. Arnold and James Wright — are not even certain they will seek election when their seats are up for a vote in April of 1984.

Wright, who was just appointed to the council to fill the vacancy created by the death of Frank Lloyd, said in an earlier interview that he wants to see what life is like on the council before he decides whether to seek election to a full term.

Mrs. Arnold has in the past said she leans toward not seeking another term. She was appointed to fill a council vacancy in 1976 after the resignation of Gene Hammond. She was elected in 1980 to a four year term.

Under city law, the mayor is elected every two years. Before 1980, the council appointed the mayor from among its own ranks.

Council members in the middle of a four-year term are allowed to seek the mayor's post and keep their own council seat even if the campaign proves unsuccessful.

CARMEL COUNCILMAN Robert Stephenson was endorsed for the 1984 mayoral campaign by councilwoman Helen Arnold during the Nov. 1 council meeting. But Stephenson has not announced plans to run for mayor, saying Mayor Charlotte Townsend is doing a good job. Mayor Townsend responds in kind by saying Stephenson would make a fine mayor.

New water directors pledge vote on dam

By JOE LIVERNOIS

SUPPORTERS of a larger dam on the Carmel River should not expect the project to dry up and blow away because pro-dam candidates were defeated at the polls Nov. 8.

Winners of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors last week pledged that voters in the district eventually will vote on the proposed dam on the San Clemente site of the Carmel River.

And if the dam proposal fails, the newly-elected directors said they hope to have some type of project to increase the water supply on the Monterey Peninsula in operation by the end of their first four-year terms.

"I certainly hope to have something on line by then," said Dick Heuer, the top vote-getter in the election. "If we don't, we should be kicked out of office."

In interviews with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook after their victories, Heuer, Patricia Bernardi and John Williams all said they do not believe their election was a mandate against the proposed dam.

"It was not an anti-dam vote," Heuer, a Carmel Valley resident, said. "A lot of people think we need a water supply project."

And Mrs. Bernardi said the new board members are committed to the completion of the environmental impact report for a dam on the San Clemente site of the Carmel River so the electorate can finally make a decision.

Instead, Heuer said, the vote was an indication that the electorate does not trust those who would benefit most from the dam to design the dam.

"It's very simple," he said. "There is a very strong anti-development feeling on this peninsula. People want a slow-down in development. It's not no-growth, but it is limited growth."

Heuer said the result of this election — with other previous slow-on-development elections in recent years around the peninsula — should serve as a lesson to developers.

"They misread the popular mood around here simply by running two developers," Heuer said. Heuer referred to candidates Nick Lombardo and M.A. "Skip" Marquard, who placed fourth and fifth, respectively, in the balloting.

HEUER, MRS. BERNARDI and Williams are all members of Carmel River Watch (CREW), a citizen group concerned with the Carmel River environment. They campaigned as a coalition that became known as the "CREW slate."

Their campaign slogan was "Don't let the developers design the dam," a slogan criticized by opponents who argued that directors of the water management district would have very little control over design of the dam.

But Heuer said directors will be very active in cost allocations for construction of the proposed dam with 18,000 ac. ft. storage capacity, as well as the planning and construction schedule. (An acre foot is 325,851 gallons).

Heuer said he was offended when he heard criticism that the coalition sparked development-oriented emotionalism with its campaign slogan. "They started it by running," he said. "Obviously, they have every right to run, but they should have been more aware of what the electorate was thinking."

He said the electorate is suspicious of developers who run for public office and their suspicions grew when Lombardo and Marquard maintained in campaign literature that consumers faced a "crisis" and water rationing during a recurrence of the 1976-77 "drought" in the near future.

The coalition maintained that the water management district already has insured drought protection by imposing responsible water management policies and by allowing the California-American Water Co. to drill new wells in lower Carmel Valley with a production capacity of about 4,000 ac. ft.

As a result, the CREW slate argued, any new water from the proposed dam would benefit new development more than it would benefit existing consumers.

THAT IS NOT TO SAY, however, that a new dam is not needed, Heuer emphasized that limited growth is inevitable, he said. And the proposed dam could improve the health of the Carmel River by ensuring a year-round release of water into the river. Full-time downstream diversion would result in constant irrigation of river bank vegetation and stabilize the steelhead salmon fishery.

PROTECTION of fisheries on the Carmel River, such as the fish ladder set up at the base of the San Clemente Dam (above), will be among the priorities Monterey Peninsula Water Management District directors must consider when they help prepare the environmental impact report for a proposed dam with 18,000 ac. ft. storage capacity on

But the benefits will not prompt the three new directors to rush into the construction of a dam with rash decisions and expensive design changes that could result if the water district does not take into account all state and federal requirements for a dam, Heuer said.

And, along the way, the water management district board will keep an eye on water-producing alternatives that might provide a cheaper water supply, he added.

In recent months, the water management district has cast an interested eye toward San Diego County, where an experimental sewage reclamation project that utilizes water hyacinths appears to be showing signs of success. (See related story, this issue.)

Last summer, the water board agreed to spend $10,000 for a preliminary feasibility study for a water hyacinth project in Monterey County.

Chairwoman Nancy McClintock of Seaside said she believes the new water board will be "well-balanced and will move along prudently for the needs of this district."

She also said the new board will not "stampede into a project before it's necessary."

Director Ed Lee of Carmel, one of five elected members of the seven-member water district board, agreed that the three new board members will work well on the board.

"They are well qualified to contribute to the environmental impact report stage," he said. "I'm very confident we'll have a good EIR."

LEE PUBLICLY endorsed candidates Lombardo, Marquard and Mark Grover because all three clearly supported a dam.

But he said he was not discouraged by the outcome because the percentage of "pro-dam" votes far outdistanced "anti-dam" votes.

Only Williams and unsuccessful incumbent William Woodworth said they personally opposed a dam and they received about 20 percent of the vote on Nov. 8, Lee said.

Candidates who expressed support for a dam captured 80 percent of the vote, he said, "which shows the public is more aware and more in agreement with my own views."

the San Clemente site of the river. All three of the candidates elected to the water district last week said the completion of the EIR and the presentation of a dam proposal to district voters would remain a top priority for the district. (California-American Water Co. photograph.)

Lee also said he believes the three winners "could constitute a new majority on the board."

"This is only speculation, but if they act cohesively, they could be a clear majority."

He disagreed with Heuer that the water management district should wait until a clear need is shown before the dam is built because costs are bound to escalate.

"The cost of the same-sized dam has increased since 1969 from about $9 million to about $30 million," Lee said.

Mrs. Bernardi said she is anxious to bring the dam issue to a vote.

"I, for one, would like to see this thing voted on," she said. "I would like it settled one way or another."

She also believes that "we have enough water for those of use here now" and that existing water supplies can be used differently with more effective management tactics.

"I know the bulk of energy will go to the EIR in the next few years, but I would like to see as much energy spent on other problems in the district," Mrs. Bernardi said.

"We should be pursuing reclamation projects like the San Diego project. That project appeals to my skin-flint heart because not only are you producing water, but you are doing it in an environmentally sound manner and you are making money on the by-products to boot."

NANCY MCCLINTOCK pointed out that the new board members will be able to "jump right into" water district business because they have all been involved with water issues through the district for several years.

Williams was both a former water district director and a former water district staff member. Heuer was appointed to the district board about four months ago to fill a vacancy and Mrs. Bernardi has been involved in water district policies that relate to the Carmel River.

"That's going to be important in the next year," Ms. McClintock said, because directors will require an understanding of the state agencies the water district will have to deal with in order to write the best EIR possible.

Discussion continues about alternative water sources

By JOE LIVERNOIS

TALK OF AQUACULTURE, water hyacinths and reverse osmosis is bound to continue in coming years with the election of Dick Heuer, Patricia Bernardi and John Williams to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

All three have said they will continue to keep an eye on a pilot reclamation project that combines water hyacinths and aquaculture with reverse osmosis in a method technicians say could provide additional water supply, treat sewage and earn money all at once.

The pilot program in San Diego County is within three years of gaining state approval but San Diego city authorities are excited about the possibilities. And so is Nancy McClintock, chairwoman of the water management district.

The water management district will spend $10,000 next year for a preliminary feasibility study that could determine if such a project is applicable on the Monterey Peninsula.

To complete the study, district directors contracted Richard King, an engineer for the Water Utilities Department of the City of San Diego who has been project engineer on the hyacinth experiment.

Some water district directors, including all three recently-elected directors, say a water hyacinth reclamation project on the Monterey Peninsula could be a worthy, cheap alternative to both water needs and sewage disposal problems the water district and area sanitary districts face.

In San Diego, the city operates a pilot plant with a capacity for up to 50,000 gallons per day and is building a 1 million gallon per day "prototype."

"The initial results are highly promising, indicating that the process may be cost effective, energy self-sufficient ... and offers an innovative technological breakthrough augmenting conventional sewage treatment, traditional water supplies, and common sources of food, feed and energy," King wrote in a water trade magazine, Water International.

The key to the process is the water hyacinth, according to King.

sewage is screened to remove solid sludge. The remainder is placed in tanks in which an anaerobic (living in the absence of free oxygen) culture is maintained.

The water hyacinths, as well as African lettuce and duckweed, are maintained in the upper half of each tank.

"The synergistic combination of animal and plant life establishes a veritable rain forest type ecosystem in each tank, and it is the presence of the plants that achieves impressive levels of filtration during the aquaculture stage of reclamation," King said in his report.

He said research has shown that "a vascular, free floating aquatic plant with an elaborate root structure — the hyacinth — is remarkably effective in removing from the raw sewage such undesirable elements as heavy metals, oils, pesticides and bacteria."

"In its natural environment, the water hyacinth's extreme hardiness and fast growth make it a major pest, yet these characteristics have made the plant eminently well-suited for use under controlled conditions."

As for the anaerobic life below, "each tank has catfish, tilapia, gambusia for mosquito control, crayfish, snails and organisms of all description common to streams (and) mud. The specific intent is to duplicate nature to the greatest extent possible in putting a swamp in a tank," he said.

The sewage water flows through six such tanks and is "subjected" to an intermediate filtration process before it goes to the reverse osmosis unit for final treatment, King said. In that unit, a plastic membrane is used to filter pollutants from the water.

Potable water is the result, but the process does not end there.

"The value of the water hyacinth continues even after it has completed its life cycle as an inexpensive biological filter," King said.

He said the city harvests 3,000 pounds of water hyacinths and converts them to fertilizer and compost, animal feed and methane gas for use in electricity production.

The methane gas could be used to power the reclamation plant, which would make it "energy self-sufficient," he said.

King wrote that while initial results appear very positive, "the next stage of inquiry will involve experts in medicine, public health, and toxicology who will guide our research in assessing the water produced by this system and its suitability for long-term human consumption."

Why Carmel schools are losing students

the public has begun to expect more results as evidenced by the election of state Supt. of Public Instruction Louis ("Bill") Honig, who promised and delivered tougher standards and more money for the public schools.

THE LACK of adequate financing for public school programs has been a major factor in decision-making by parents who contemplate a private school.

To understand the public schools' money problems, one must understand the reasons behind the financial crises.

The financial woes for the Carmel Unified School District have been caused by three factors outside local control: the state Supreme Court's Serrano/Priest decision of 1971, passage of the property tax-cutting Prop. 13 and the declining enrollment itself.

It was these financial problems that forced Carmel trustees to order program cuts, closure of two schools and higher student-teacher ratios — some of the very reasons that caused parents to enroll their children in the private schools.

The Serrano/Priest decision was widely publicized upon its announcement, but since has taken a backseat to Prop. 13 as the scapegoat for the public schools' financial problems.

Basically, the state Supreme Court ruled that the constitutional provision of equal education for all could not be met because high wealth districts such as Carmel were able to spend more money per child than the lower-income school systems.

Unequal funding meant unequal education, the court reasoned.

In those pre-Prop. 13 days, most school financing came from local property taxes. In response to the Serrano/Priest decision, state lawmakers approved legislation that redirected some property tax revenue from the high wealth districts to the poorer school systems in an attempt to balance funding.

As part of the state legislation, a formula was developed that gave low wealth districts much higher annual cost of living increases in state financing than the appropriations to the wealthier schools.

So while inflation reached double digits, the relatively "wealthy" Carmel district only received about 1 to 3 percent more money annually from the state. Poorer districts, meanwhile, received annual increases of 8 to 12 percent.

Then, in 1978, voters approved Prop. 13, which restricted property tax increases. Before passage of the initiative, schools could raise funds by increasing property taxes. Prop. 13 took away that fundraising tool for all practical purposes with its two-thirds requirement for voter approval of a tax increase.

And at the same time the one-two punch of Serrano/Priest and Prop. 13 was battering the Carmel budget, the school district then began to experience a decline in elementary enrollment.

FOR EACH enrolled student — called average daily attendance by school officials — the Carmel Unified School District receives a specified amount of money from the state. This year the ADA is $2,247 annually per student.

Districts do not receive money for students who are not there. If enrollment declines, so does the state income.

It is a double blow. Because of the lack of funds, the district has lost students to the private schools. And for each student who leaves, $2,247 goes out the door with him or her.

Financing is only part of the reason for the increase in private school enrollment. There is a variety of other factors.

To understand the reasons behind the success of area private schools and perhaps shed some light on why parents opt for the more financially-costly private education, the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook talked with the administrators of Briarcliff Academy, All Saints' Episcopal Day School, Junipero Serra School and Santa Catalina School.

Understandably, the administrators were reluctant to criticize their public sector counterparts. Instead they voiced support and nodded sympathetically when they talked about a public school system plagued by money, discipline, morale and public relations problems.

Private school administrators say there are four major reasons why parents are attracted to the public schools:

- Low student-teacher ratio;
- More structure in the curriculum;
- Better discipline;
- And a much stronger emphasis on morality or religion.

Perhaps the beacon of the trend to private school enrollment is Briarcliff Academy, a private non-denominational kindergarten-through-seventh grade school located at the site of the old public Carmel Woods Elementary School just north of the Carmel city limits.

Briarcliff Academy started out small in September of 1982 with an enrollment of about 50 students in grades kindergarten through sixth. Enrollment and programs have since doubled. A seventh grade was added this fall and there are plans to start an eighth grade class next September.

Of the 122 students now enrolled at Briarcliff Academy, 58 live in Carmel and Carmel Valley. Eighteen live in Pebble Beach where about half are in the Carmel Unified School District boundaries and the other half reside in the Pacific Grove School District boundaries.

That means that there are at least 65 students who attend the private school that live within the boundaries of the public school system.

BRIARCLIFF ACADEMY Headmaster Jerry Traynor is himself a refugee from the public schools. He was teaching principal of Woods School before the site was closed because of financial problems and declining enrollment.

"Generally, the people who come here from the public schools all over the peninsula are disappointed in what is being offered out there educationally," Traynor said.

"The majority who have actually left the Carmel Unified School District are at the junior high school level and the number of people who have left public junior highs is a typical thing across the United States. It is no reflection on the Carmel Unified School District.

"Parents of junior high school age children are concerned that they do not want their children to get lost in the shuffle of a larger school and have turned to us because we offer a small setting that has high academic standards and they know the staff is caring and nurturing."

Traynor checks the report cards for each student so he knows if there is an academic problem. He also holds weekly meetings with each individual teacher. He knows all of the pupils by name.

"Parents come in to me and say their kids have come home and said, 'Gee, there's no swearing, it's quiet and we're able to work without being bothered.' Kids can't believe that they're really learning here," Traynor said.

"I think a lot of people are looking for discipline and structure. They want a caring, nurturing, family atmosphere. That's what we're doing here."

Additionally, some parents like the "neighborhood school" concept and preferred to keep their child at Briarcliff Academy rather than transfer the child to River School when Woods School closed, Traynor said.

And other parents who have just moved in from the East Coast traditionally have their children attend private schools, he added.

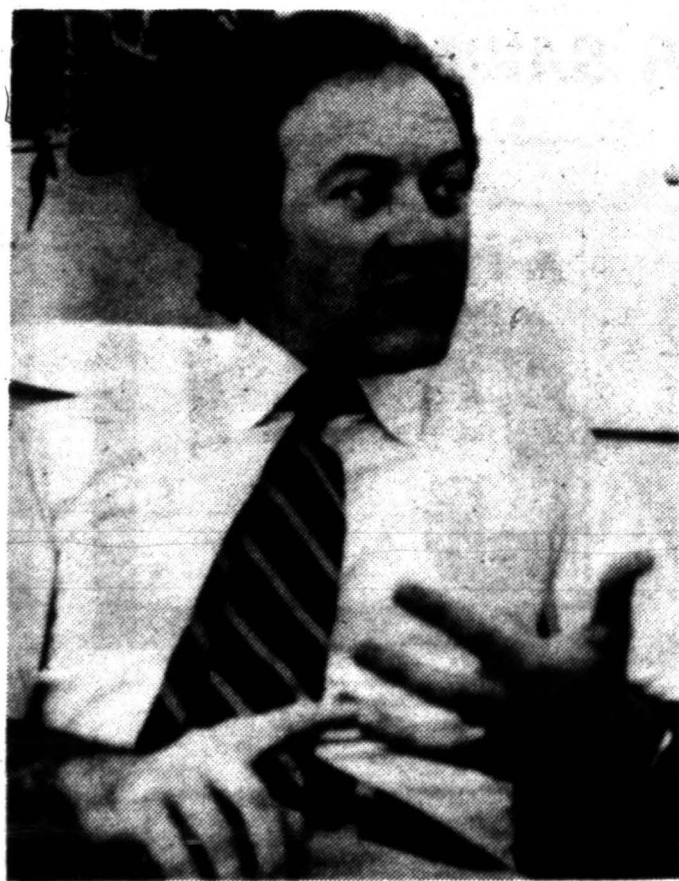

Traynor says he would probably never go back to be public schools and loves his position at Briarcliff Academy.

"The only way I would ever go back is if I could effect great changes, which I don't think I ever could because of the system," he said.

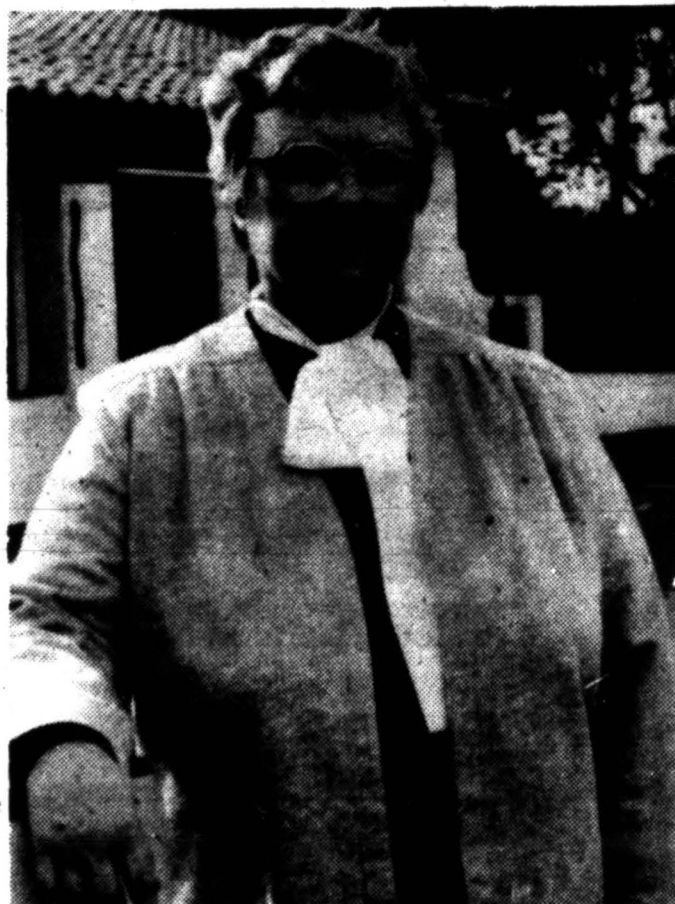

But he is sympathetic to the public schools. "They're fighting numbers. They have to take the discipline problems that we don't," he said. "They have their work cut out for them. My heart goes out to them."

TRAYNOR SAID it is important for public school teachers and administrators to begin to work together.

"You have to really look at what you're doing and why you're there. You're there for children. You should pull together as a team.

"Throw out the adult egos and all the pettiness that goes along with it and look what you can do for the children," Traynor said.

The cost to attend Briarcliff ranges from $1,800 to $2,800 depending on the grade level.

Like all of the private schools, Briarcliff offers financial aide programs.

At the Catholic Junipero Serra School, Sister Geraldine laughs about the waiting lists and recalled a not-so-unusual story about a mother who wanted to register her son although the boy was still a baby.

The school at Carmel Mission, which opened in 1943 and now operates on a $260,000 annual budget, also is growing. The new kindergarten building opened in the fall of 1982 and classes were filled immediately.

Of the 250 students at the kindergarten through eighth grade school, 93 reside within the Carmel Unified School District boundaries.

There is a lengthy waiting list for all of the classes, which are kept at a student/teacher ratio of 28-to-one (25-to-one for kindergarten).

Sister Geraldine, who is the principal of the Roman Catholic school, believes that parents of her students want a Christian environment for their children's education.

"These are parents who are truly concerned about the religious development of their child," she said. "There is a great deal of emphasis on religion here."

Another key emphasis at Junipero Serra School is the highly-structured academic environment, Sister Geraldine said.

"I think the parents really like the more structured environment that we have. I think we are freer to discipline the children than are the public schools.

"Very often they do say it's the discipline. I don't want to knock the public school people. They're dedicated people. I think sometimes it's the system that holds them back from what they want to do."

The cost to attend Junipero Serra School is $970 annually, $880 for kindergarten students.

AT ALL Saints' Episcopal Day School, enrollment is strictly limited and waiting lists are the norm. For someone to get in, a student must drop out.

Despite the addition of two new wings recently, All Saints purposely keeps its enrollment limited to about 200 in grades pre-kindergarten through eighth.

Of that 200 enrollment, 78 have Carmel city post office addresses and another 60 live in Carmel Valley, according to Head Mistress Laurie Boone.

Mrs. Boone quickly dispelled any notion that All Saints, or any of the private schools, is in competition for students with public education.

"We're interested in meeting the needs of the community," she said. "We're not interested in competing with the public schools and I don't think we are."

"It's not a competitive situation and I hope it's not perceived that way," Mrs. Boone said. "Public schools have been hit hard and I don't think they need to be hit any harder."

Mrs. Boone said she does not ask prospective parents why they do not want their child to attend public schools.

"I don't talk to them about public schools. I'm not interested in their experiences with the public schools. I'm interested in that they know what All Saints is, not what the public schools aren't.

"It's a conscious choice. We are an alternative to public education, not a competitor," Mrs. Boone continued. "A healthy public school system also contributes to a healthy private system."

It is the "small, family, Christian atmosphere" that draws families to All Saints, she believes.

"We are a no-growth school. We are not taking any more students. We haven't been for at least three years. We're not expanding our student population," Mrs. Boone said.

"We keep our classes small (20-to-one). We don't want any more students. We like to keep the ones we have and their families."

Besides an emphasis on the Christian environment with daily prayers and religious classes, parents also choose All Saints because of its classical, traditional curriculum, she said.

"We're very traditional in our choice of what is taught. They take these classes daily," Mrs. Boone said. "We are a structured school. There are not a lot of class choices except after school."

For example, Spanish is required of all students in grades one through three. In the fourth year they may choose to take French, but a foreign language is mandated through the eighth grade. In addition, seventh and eighth graders are tutored in Latin while also studying either Spanish or French.

LEARNING DOES not stop at 3 p.m. either.

The school offers an hour-long enrichment program after school, which includes sports, music, the arts and science.

"It is so popular that we have to have a late bus," Mrs. Boone said.

Additionally, homework is the norm every day. Third graders are assigned on the average 30 minutes a night. By the time an All Saints pupil is in the seventh grade, he or she must spend an average of two and one-half hours nightly on studies.

Despite the stringent requirements, students and their parents like what All Saints offers.

"It's like a community here. The children are here for 10 years. We get to know them and their families," Mrs. Boone said. "It's a stability factor. We're very much like a family. It's very stable. There are not a whole lot of people changing. It's predictable."

The cost for this "family atmosphere" is high. Annual tuition ranges from $2,000 (pre-kindergarten) to $3,800 (seventh and eighth grades).

At Santa Catalina School in Monterey, 22 percent of the 240 first through eighth grade students reside within the Carmel Unified School District boundaries.

Again parents are drawn to this private school for its academic structure, emphasis on religion and discipline.

"My feelings are very clear that it's an individual decision made by the family based on a wide range of factors," said Melanie Dugan, director of the lower school.

To offer reasons why parents choose public education, Ms. Dugan pointed to a lecture given recently by Harvard professor John Salyer.

Salyer said that the factors involved in choices for private schools include family traditions, the feeling that children get more individual attention, and the lack of discipline problems in the private schools.

"Parents view it as a good education for their children and an investment of time and money in that important part of a child's life," said Sister Carlotta, principal of the school.

"In many ways, parents view it as a foundation for the ensuing years of high school and college," she added.

Annual tuition at Santa Catalina ranges from $2,950 for grades one and two to $3,750 for grades six, seven and eight.

(Next week, the second part of the series will focus on why parents choose to enroll their children in private schools and how Carmel Unified School District officials feel about the growth of the private schools in this area.)

Bank of Carmel: warm exterior and success

By MICHAEL GARDNER

NEARLY EVERY Friday morning, National Bank of Carmel executives Don Hart and Don Nelson pop into local businesses with a batch of warm cookies, a few new jokes and friendly handshakes.

These Friday morning informal meetings with their clients is just one example of the "customer is first" attitude at the National Bank of Carmel that has propelled the bank into a position as one of the leading financial institutions in Carmel just three years after its founding.

The bank, which opened in early 1981, is one of the two remaining locally-owned and operated full-service financial institutions on the peninsula. The other is Monterey County Bank.

The former giant among locally-owned banks — Monterey Savings and Loan — was bought by the Los Angeles-based Coast Federal Savings in 1982.

A glimpse of the annual financial statement immediately supports claims by bank officers that the National Bank of Carmel is one of the fastest growing businesses on the Monterey Peninsula.

Assets more than doubled from the June 30, 1982 figure of $20.570 million to $44.330 million on June 30, 1983. That is an increase of 116 percent.

Other increases listed in the financial report read like a stockholder's dream: deposits increased 119 percent (from $15.831 to $38.148 million), loans went up 186 percent (from $8.097 to 23.173 million), and net income jumped 104 percent (from $106,000 to $216,000).

The 340 stockholders received $1.90 net income per share for the first nine months of 1983 compared to 96 cents net income per share in the first nine months of 1982.

Just this past August the bank formed a holding company called the Carmel Bancorporation, which engages in real estate loans through government guarantees and also sells and purchases securities through discount brokerage houses.

In addition to its financial growth, the bank has expanded from its original office on Dolores Street to a large two-story facility at Clocktower Place at the mouth of Carmel Valley. That new office opened in November of 1982.

The bank still has plans to build a new office on Garden Road in Monterey. However, the recent bankruptcy of Cambridge Plan Inc. has forced officials to delay the project, probably until the still-under-development Ryan Ranch light industrial park is completed.

CINDY JOHNSON checked several records in the computer room at the National Bank of Carmel office at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

BUT WHY in the 1980s era of failing banks and recession did a new bank get started, and how did it grow at such a tremendous pace?

Ironically, the loan policy of the local banks was the major reason why their now competitor was launched, founder Alan Williams told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"One of the frustrations was I had some clients who owned a lot free and clear and had three-fourths of the money needed to build a house and all they had to do was borrow the balance," recalled Williams, a building designer in Carmel and now vice chairman of the board of the bank.

But his clients ran up against a "roadblock" created by the loan formulas used by the banks, Williams said.

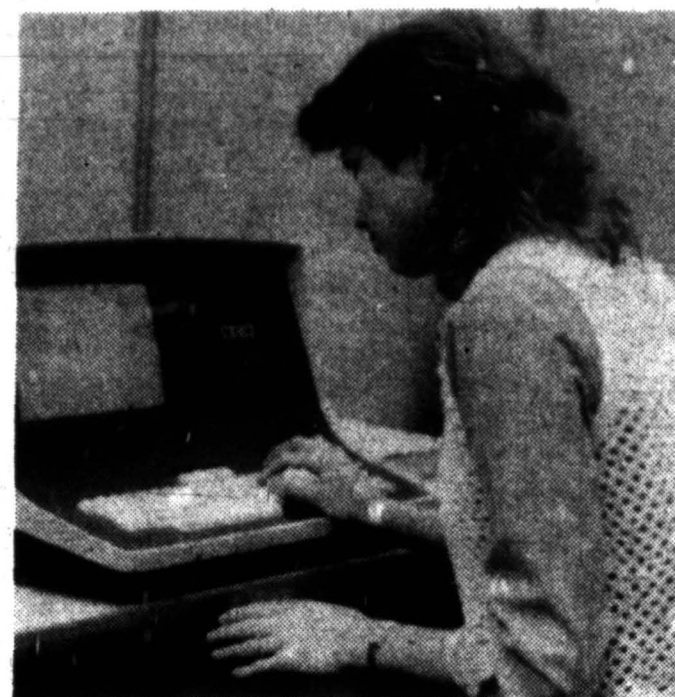

The banks rejected the loan requests because his clients were both elderly retired schoolteachers who didn't have a large income, although they did own property.

"They didn't have enough income to meet the magic formula of the big banks," Williams said. "They don't take into consideration people. The columns of figures either add up or they don't add up."

"I found it frustrating that an unforgiving impersonal bank formula could strip someone of their dream home," he said.

The retired couple eventually found a loan through unconventional sources, but the incident nagged Williams.

He also was upset that — except for the then-locally owned Monterey Savings — the banks "exported" more money to other cities for loans than they would loan here on the peninsula.

"We are just a deposit machine for those lenders," he said.

Williams voiced his frustration to his attorney, George Walker, who was later to become the chairman of the board.

Together, the two of them in 1980 began to enlist the support of other prominent residents. They hired Don Nelson (formerly with the old Security National Bank) as president and chief executive officer.

They also imported Bob Boynton from Los Angeles to be the executive vice president. Later, Boynton assumed the presidency of the 1983-formed holding company, the Bancorporation.

Among the founders of the bank are: photographer Ansel Adams, clothier Dick Bruhn, Doctors Ron and John Faia, former Carmel Mayor Gene Hammond, attorney Don Freeman, major Carmel commercial property owner Glenn Leidig, insurance man and motel owner Matthew Little, realtor Larry Morago, engineer Clayton Neill and tie-maker Robert Talbott.

ON JAN. 29, 1981, the National Bank of Carmel opened its doors in the old Nielsen Bros. Market building on Dolores Street. Its initial assets are listed at $3.250 million.

Bank executives Nelson, Boynton and Hart — who has risen from marketing director to vice president — say the growth of the National Bank of Carmel can be summed up in two words: customer service.

"Service is the key to the whole story of the bank," Hart said. "It is the ability to perform for the customer."

"The reason the bank started is we are an alternative to the big banks. We have hired the best staff we can to respond to the needs of our customers rapidly," Nelson said.

"We make loan and policy decisions locally," he continued. "We don't have to wait for those decisions from some corporate office out of the area."

Boynton thinks people should look forward to going to a bank, rather than dreading it.

"Many people think that going to a bank is second only to going to the dentist. We hope we erase that attitude," he said.

"Good banking in Carmel is a social experience," Boynton said.

But not all of the banking business takes place in the bank. Many times, Nelson, Hart,

'They didn't have enough income to meet the magic formula of the big banks,' Williams said. 'They don't take into consideration people. The columns of figures either add up or they don't add up.'

Boynton or almost any employee can be found in the customer's business.

"We don't want to be staid cardboard personalities stuck behind big chunks of mahogany. We're not locked behind our desks," Boynton said.

Besides the winning smiles and public service type of activities, The National Bank of Carmel offers all of the services of the normal bank.

It has checking and savings accounts, a financial planner, investment counseling and even an automatic teller card that can be used at over a hundred other independent banks throughout California.

Loans are the bread and butter of the banking industry, and at National Bank of Carmel it is no different.

The bank is actively involved in the Small Business Administration loan program, which is not the "nightmare" most people think it is. "We're really setting out to prove that an SBA loan is viable, especially on the peninsula where most businesses are small and there is that entrepreneur attitude," Boynton said.

The bank has whittled the waiting time for most SBA loan decisions down to a maximum of two weeks, Boynton said.

IN ADDITION, it takes just two days for a decision on most personal loan requests, he said.

"We look at ways to make the deal rather than ways to turn it down," Boynton said.

But the service that makes the trio beam with pride is a new $170,000 in-house computer system that processes all of the checks and other financial paperwork.

The big plus for customers, Boynton said, is that tellers can immediately verify almost all financial transactions.

"If you need to know if a big check is cleared the teller can tell you right there if the check has come through," he said.

In most larger banks, the checks are processed through a service bureau. Because the nearest service bureau is in South San Francisco, it takes days for a customer to know whether a specific check has been cashed, Boynton pointed out.

Because of its costs and manpower necessary to operate it, an in-house computer system is a rarity among the smaller independent banks, he added.

"It's an extra bullet in our holster to tell the customer that we can do things that much faster," Boynton said. "Everyone says don't be a pioneer or you'll have an arrow in your back. But we felt we were ready."

Boynton admits that the quick growth at the bank has an inherent danger of losing its main selling point — that it is a small local bank that cares for the individual more than balance sheets.

"There's always that danger. Yes, I'm afraid that could happen. That's why we spend a lot of time looking at ourselves," he said. "That's one of our main motivations. We have a lot of in-house customer awareness programs."

And Hart added: We don't want to lose our local approach. We understand where our roots are."

George Hobbs elected to fire district

The new commissioner to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District will be George "Bud" Hobbs, a Salinas Valley farmer and Carmel Valley resident for 17 years.

Hobbs placed second in balloting Nov. 8, behind incumbent Larry Busick, in what was the first election for commissioners since the fire district was formed in 1948.

Alan Cosseboom, a Carmel Valley businessman, placed third in the election.

According to Monterey County Elections Department figures, more than 40 percent of the 3,137 registered voters in the fire district turned out for the election, compared to little more than 20 percent throughout Monterey County.

The Carmel Valley Fire Protection District includes 14 square miles from Garland Regional Park to the west to the Sleepy Hollow subdivision to the east, including Carmel Valley Village.

Hobbs will replace Clayton Neill Jr. on the board of commissioners. Neill, who has been a commissioner for 10 years, served at his final board meeting Nov. 15.

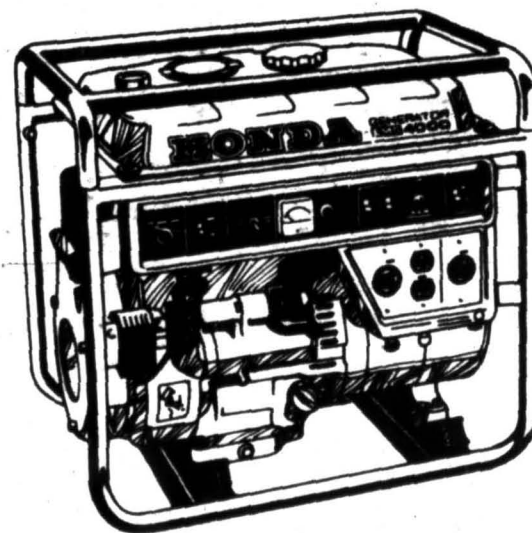

County-wide election results are expected to be certified Nov. 18, according to election department officials. Preliminary returns for the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District showed Busick with 768 votes, or 41.9 percent of the total; Hobbs with 592 votes, or 32.3 percent; and Cosseboom with 469 votes, or 25.6 percent.

executive vice president of the bank and president of the Bancorporation; and Don Nelson, president and chief executive office.

Council moves ahead with Piccadilly

IN A SWITCH from the indecisiveness of previous years, the Carmel City Council Tuesday night with little discussion gave quick approval to the development of Piccadilly Park.

However, the council delayed action on the fate of another four proposed major city projects — an annex for Harrison Memorial Library, senior citizen housing, a parking garage at Sunset Center and remodeling of city hall.

After half a decade of controversy and two elections, the 4,000 sq. ft. lot purchased by the council in 1980 for about $400,000 finally will become a park on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

In response to the Nov. 8 election results, the council approved a staff recommendation "to scale down the previously prepared plans to fit within the authorized budget and to proceed towards implementation."

Measure A in the Nov. 8 election, a binding initiative which would have forced the council to sell the park property, was defeated by a vote of 816 to 743.

"This project may or may not involve the assistance and cooperation of the garden club and the Heritage Society," according to the staff recommendation.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club and the newly-formed Heritage Society both have volunteered to help the city develop the park at minimal costs.

The city has allocated $75,000 in the 1983-84 municipal budget for park landscaping. The most recent proposal by Santa Cruz landscape designer Gordon Andrews would cost the city an estimated $135,000. Both park supporters and opponents agree that those plans are too elaborate and costly.

The decision to go ahead with Piccadilly Park was made quickly and with little discussion.

Just as quickly the council decided to let a special committee develop recommendations for a proposed annex to Harrison Memorial Library, northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Lincoln Street.

The five-member committee is to study potential alternatives in the wake of the voters' rejection of a council scheme to move the library to a new library, multi-level parking garage and park complex at Sunset Center.

Councilmen Robert Stephenson and James Wright will meet with two still-to-be-selected library trustees. A fifth committee member will be appointed by those four.

Alternatives for the committee to study include a return to the original plan to build a

$1.2 million annex at the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

TWO OTHER alternatives are: close Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues and construct an annex directly on Lincoln Street; or acquire the Rittmaster building to the east for remodeling as an annex.

The council does not plan to let the Sunset Center parking garage proposal die. The council directed staff to prepare a study on the costs of oiling and lining the vacant lot at Sunset Center. The city could then charge for parking to see if people would pay for a garage at that location.

In addition, the traffic engineer is to report to the council next month on possible ways to form a parking assessment district to pay for a parking facility.

The council has received a report from the engineer that states a two-level, 241-space underground parking garage would cost the council an estimated $2.63 million.

The council also referred to the library annex committee any discussion of a proposed parking facility at the original annex site on Lincoln Street.

As a result of the election, the council also is faced with either remodeling the existing city hall or building a new one.

Previous estimates by architect Fred Keeble indicate remodeling of the Monte Verde Street site would cost the city about $280,000.

The council also agreed that staff should continue negotiations with the Carmel Foundation for the potential development of an approximately 20-unit senior citizen complex on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

DA won't charge school board

THERE IS no evidence that the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education violated the Brown Act — the state anti-secrecy law — when it met Sept. 28 in a closed session to discuss the length of the contract for Supt. William Rand.

That was the ruling released Tuesday (Nov. 15) by Monterey County Dist. Atty. William Curtis.

Curtis investigated a complaint filed by parent Grace Davis of Carmel that alleged the board violated the state law which governs which topics government agencies can discuss behind closed doors.

Mrs. Davis complained that the board discussed Rand's salary and length of contract in the closed session. Board members admitted they briefly talked about the length of the contract, but claimed they never discussed his proposed salary.

Trustees were confident state law allows them to discuss the length of contract behind closed doors.

Curtis added a review of minutes of past closed door discussions indicates trustees talked about items that "were questionable" topics to be included in executive session discussions. He did not elaborate on the sessions or topics.

In addition, Curtis said there were enough borderline cases to warrant his recommendation that the new school board to be seated later this month be given an orientation on the Brown Act.

Carmel Sanitary District to decide whether to help P.B.

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE CARMEL SANITARY District Board of Directors is expected to decide finally Nov. 17 whether it wishes to help the Pebble Beach Community Services District receive grants to rebuild its pumping stations.

Directors are to meet at 1:30 p.m. in Carmel City Hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The meeting could prove to be another acrimonious fray, since the Pebble Beach board still has not rescinded a 1979 resolution considered by some Carmel directors as a symbol of the uncooperative attitude they believe permeates their relationship with Pebble Beach.

The Pebble Beach district purchases one-third of the sewage treatment capacity of the Carmel district plant, though it maintains its own collection system, including pump stations that state health officials say can create a health hazard in Pebble Beach. Pebble Beach has been ordered by the California Regional Water Quality Control Board to replace the pumps.

Replacement of the pump stations will cost about $500,000 and much of that money can come through state and federal grants.

Those grants were included in original Carmel grant applications for a reclamation/plant improvement project it proposed. But since Pebble Beach directors oppose the reclamation project, they passed a resolution in 1979 that ordered Carmel to remove the pump station portion of the grant application from the total grant project.

Funds for the Carmel plant improvement project have been approved and work is already under way, but the Environmental Protection Agency has balked at releasing funds for the reclamation project. (See related story, this issue.)

So the Pebble Beach district has asked the Carmel board to seek an amendment to the plant improvement project grants that would pay for the pumping plants. Carmel would be the "lead agency" and, as a result, responsible for the project, though Pebble Beach has promised it would accept liability.

NEVERTHELESS, Carmel is convinced the grant amendment would increase its own administrative workload without any direct benefit to Carmel customers, according to Michael Zambory.

"If we take this, it's only because we want to be nice guys," Zambory said.

But Carmel directors told representatives from Pebble Beach about six months ago they might consider the proposal favorably if Pebble Beach rescinded the offending resolution.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend, who will serve her final Carmel Sanitary District board meeting Nov. 17, has said the Carmel district could not legally act until the resolution is rescinded.

Carmel has agreed not to vote on the Pebble Beach request until Pebble Beach takes action on the 1979 resolution.

But after six months, Pebble Beach directors still have not rescinded the resolution. At its last meeting in Pebble Beach Oct. 28, directors said they do not believe the resolution is as limiting as Carmel directors say it is.

Also on Nov. 17, the Carmel board is scheduled to consider approval of a purchase of a computer and software.

Carmel library trustees elated over vote results

By JOE LIVERNOIS

HARRISON MEMORIAL Library trustees were clearly elated after voters in Carmel turned down a Carmel City Council plan to move the library to a new building in the Sunset Center parking lot Nov. 8.

Trustees said they believe the vote is an indication Carmel residents are emotionally tied to the old building on Ocean Avenue and Lincoln Street.

But the library is cramped and trustees are itching to spend the $1 million endowment fund on either a library annex across the street from the existing building or an addition to the building that would encroach on Lincoln Street.

Future plans for additional space at the busy library will be a hot topic among trustees at their next meeting at 4 p.m. Nov. 22 in Carmel City Hall.

Trustees obviously feel vindicated by the two-to-one margin in opposition to the city council plans. The city council plan failed in the advisory vote by a 972-to-548 margin.

Earlier this year, the library board moved forward to build an annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth streets. By the time the board had spent $52,000 of its endowment funds on plans for the annex, the city council halted the process in order to bring its own scheme to a vote of the Carmel electorate.

The city council plan would have moved Carmel City Hall to the existing library building and would have built a parking garage beneath a new library and a park in the north parking lot at Sunset Center. The entire project would have cost $5.5 million.

Most of the city council members contacted by the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week said they are willing to accept the outcome of the advisory ballot. (See related story, this issue.)

But Councilman Robert Stephenson said last week he still favors the library relocation and added that those who opposed the city council plan "had any reasonable, sound, logical reason to keep the library."

His comments prompted a strong response from several library board members.

'I'M PRETTY APPALLED he can make the type of statements he has in the face

Council wants to cooperate

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IT'S TIME to call a truce to the war of words and begin cooperation for the best interests of the city.

So says the Carmel City Council, which was the target of verbal barrages by the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees throughout the fall election campaign.

Library trustees were openly critical of the defeated council-backed advisory measure that asked voters whether they approved of a plan to move Harrison Memorial Library to a new $5.5 million underground parking garage, library and park complex at Sunset Center.

Voters Nov. 8 rejected the plan by a hefty 972-548 margin. The library board also opposed the scheme, which envisioned the relocation of city hall to the existing Harrison Memorial Library building.

Now a committee of council members and library trustees is to begin work soon to develop recommendations for an annex to Harrison Memorial Library. (See related story, this issue.)

The council believes the two boards can put past animosities to rest and work together for the best solution, members told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"I hope that now after the election the city council and the library board will get to know each other better and know that we are here to serve the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea," Mayor Townsend said.

"We have to stop bickering and never think about it again. I think actually the friction was personal and minimal," the mayor added. "I can't think of any reason why we can't work together."

"Why shouldn't we be able to work together?" asked James Wright. "I am sure that everyone will be working for a solution of the results," said Trustee Jean Grace. "After all, we do live in a democracy. The word I would use to describe his comments is 'incomprehensible,' and I use that when I want to be nice."

"He's a sore loser," said Trustee Walter Gorey. "I think someone ought to go wake him up."

Ms. Grace said she could have understood Stephenson's statements had the vote been close.

Stephenson groused that he thought opponents had spread "inaccurate and untruthful" statements about the library issue in a flyer he said was distributed around the post office before the vote.

Despite Stephenson's comments, the Sunset Center library scheme has met its doom. "There's no question that that option is dead," said library board Chairman Bernard Anderson.

And, ironically, the annex proposal is also no longer a top priority among trustees contacted last week.

Ms. Grace and Gorey both said they would prefer to put any addition to the library "under one roof," which would be possible if the city closed Lincoln Street permanently to make way for the addition.

But they agreed that other options ought to be sought and considered at the library board level. The library board would recommend alternatives to the city council, they said.

They also added they would "be happy" to discuss the choices with the city council and that they will be able to put aside previous disagreements in the effort.

But Ms. Grace said the library board will be "more careful" this time so it does not again spend money on plans the city may later negate.

"Before we spend any endowment money, we need a commitment from the city in writing," she said. "We've got to be sure that the city is dealing with us completely in good faith. We learned a lesson."

Ms. Grace also said she would continue to ask the city "not to tie parking with the library. We've been saying that all along."

She said that each time anybody has come up with a plan to add more space to the library, the city council wants to put a parking garage beneath it.

Ronald Kabat, a recently-appointed trustee to the library board, said he had "no impressions" of the Nov. 8 vote, except that he would "obviously agree with the voters."

Trustee Pat Faul could not be reached for comment.

that is acceptable. I think we'll move on it as fast as we can."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said there is no animosity on the council's part.

"I think they (the library trustees) should bury the hatchet. We never had the hatchet out," Mrs. Arnold said. "Let's get back to a spirit of cooperation."

"Possible? It has to be. You can't have two governmental bodies working on a project that one owns and the other operates without some form of cooperation," Mrs. Arnold added.

"I have no idea," Councilman Robert Stephenson said when asked whether the two bodies could get along in the wake of the election. "I haven't talked to anybody else about how they feel. I think we should be able to work together."

COUNCILMAN David Maradei, the most vocal supporter of a library move to Sunset Center, says it is up to the library board to decide whether to cooperate.

"I think I can promise the commitment of the council. I think we can work together," Maradei said. "It is the will of the council to work together. Now it's up to the library board."

But Maradei is "very disturbed" over the library board's actions and statements during the months leading up to the Nov. 8 election.

Asked how he felt about the board's approach to the election, Maradei responded:

"The position the library board took over the master plan issue during the elections was in my opinion confrontational and opposed to the majority of the elected city council," Maradei said. "I feel that these statements have created a great divisiveness in the community." Maradei believes the library board "ridiculed and demeaned the council," which "was not in the best interests of the community."

CONDITIONS inside Harrison Memorial Library were once far less crowded, as evidenced by this photo which shows the main reading room about a decade ago. Despite the crowded conditions, voters in Carmel have defeated a city council-backed plan to construct a new, larger library at Sunset Center, and council members and library trustees say they'll make a renewed effort to work together toward resolution of library problems.

What's that crack about the Good Egg Awards presented by the Chamber of Commerce serving Greater Carmel and Carmel Valley?

It's no yoke; it is presented each year to hard boiled individuals who scramble around the Valley to perform worthy civic services. No three-minute flashes in the pan, these Good Eggs can't be beaten.

The chamber of commerce presented three Good Eggs Awards Nov. 12 at its annual officer installation banquet in the Carmel Valley Holiday Inn.

Winners included Ruth Bishop of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club; Roger Gardner, a Carmel Valley firefighter; and Dick Krueger, a Carmel Valley businessman and past president of the chamber.

Also on Saturday, Robert "Chuck" McKay of McKay's Business Service was installed chamber president for the coming year.

Keynote speaker for the event was Rep. Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley, who returned from Washington D.C. just in time to tell chamber members the latest on Grenada, Beirut and Medicare, according to Grace Darcy, chamber director.

John Keller and the Do-do-wah Street Irregulars provided entertainment, while Melissa Taylor conducted the raffle.

Big Sur dam concept fades away

By JOE LIVERNOIS

A DAM ON THE Big Sur River is no longer an issue — or a possibility — in a draft plan of policies that would govern human interaction with the river.

But residents in the Big Sur area are still not happy with the plan because many of the policies are not "tied together." On Monday, Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor William Peters agreed to meet with several Big Sur residents in an effort to tie those loose ends together.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors took its first look at the Big Sur Protected Waterway Management Plan when it met in a rare Monday meeting in Salinas.

Also on Monday, it reached a tentative compromise in a long-running debate between the county and the Coastal Commission about gate fees in the Del Monte Forest.

In the Big Sur River debate, Peters apparently believed the plan would be acceptable to Big Sur residents if the board deleted all references to the formation of a water management district to regulate uses of the river.

But Steve Pappas, a professional civic planner from Big Sur, said the water management district is no longer the issue.

It once was. When the first draft of the plan hit the Monterey County Planning Commission earlier this year, members of the Coast Property Owners Association, a land use group of Big Sur residents, were outraged with plan policies that urged the creation of a water management district in the area.

They said the policies would be "enabling legislation" for the construction of a dam on the Big Sur River. While the possibility of a dam on the river was remote, the residents in the area said they opposed any policy that would "leave the door open" to a dam.

"We've never really been more unified in this community over an issue," Pappas told the board of supervisors.

subcommittee and met with CPOA officials and California water experts at a special workshop sponsored by the CPOA in mid-summer. The CPOA drew up its own version of the draft plan.

The planning commission, after three meetings, accepted some changes to the plan, including much of the CPOA language, and recommended the board of supervisors accept the plan.

But Pappas said details of the plan, most of them minor, still need to be revised to "tie it together" and he urged the supervisors to postpone approval until the CPOA and supervisors can discuss the details.

Big Sur resident Douglas Walling was not quite as subtle about how he viewed the existing draft of the plan as Pappas was.

"When the CPOA formed its subcommittee, we built a protection plan," he said. "Even with the revised planning commission plan, we still see it as an exploitation plan."

The CPOA particularly disagrees with new language in the plan that states the county should initiate a hydrologic study "to be done by the California Department of Resources, the U.S. Geological Survey or a qualified consultant."

The CPOA said the U.S. Geological Survey should be the only agency to complete the study because, according to Walling, "the USGS officials are the only individuals who would not be influenced by developer and non-developer interests."

Peters agreed to meet with CPOA officials, county staff and another supervisor at 1 p.m. Nov. 28 in Peters' office.

The board of supervisors rescheduled a public hearing on the Big Sur plan for 2 p.m. Dec. 13.

Also on Dec. 13, the board will consider new policies to allow public access to Stillwater Cove and to regulate gate fees.

THE NEW POLICIES were unveiled by officials for the Pebble Beach Company after both the company and the county were shot down again by the Coastal Commission in its September meeting as commissioners insisted that access should not be allowed to the beach at Stillwater Cove and that the county should not be forced to regulate gate fees into Pebble Beach.

"I've been a soprano ever since that meeting" in September, Peters said.

The issues are the only two details left to be resolved before the commission will certify the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program.

The gate fee issue appears to be resolved; but Stillwater Cove could remain a sticky issue if the new plan is presented to the Coastal Commission.

The Coastal Commission had insisted the county make sure that all increases to the gate fee be used in the maintenance of the company-owned roads in the Del Monte Forest, according to Tom Jamison, a representative for the Pebble Beach Company.

Jamison said such a policy was "inappropriate and unworkable" and would result in an "administrative mire."

"But rather than stick our heads in the sand and pound our fists on the table, the company sought alternatives," he said.

After discussions with the Coastal Commission staff, the company has proposed that the gate fees should be based on the consumer price index. "It keeps the county out of the issue, it's a very clean standard and the Coastal Commission staff is receptive to the idea," Jamison said.

Jamison said he and Larry Seeman, another Pebble Beach Company representative, have worked out a public access proposal for Stillwater Cove that they said could satisfy both the Coastal Commission and members of the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach.

Piero said the plan was more noteworthy for its limitations and said he would not support it because it is too restrictive.

"This is a public access plan with a litany of conditions that effectively mean no public access," Del Piero said.

On the other hand, Bill McClintock, a representative of the Del Monte Forest Homeowners Association, complained that the company has "surrendered" its private property rights, at the expense of the property rights of its neighbors.

The Pebble Beach Co. plans to restore its Beach Club facilities, but needs a Coastal Commission permit to do so. The Coastal Commission is certain to add conditions to that permit which would force the company to allow access at nearby Stillwater Cove. As a result, company officials hope to get an access policy approved before it is conditioned upon them.

McClintock said the company proposal is an indication the company has "surrendered" its property rights, which he said is the right of the company. But he said the surrender "effects all of use who live there."

The company proposal would include construction of six parking spaces near the 17th fairway of the Pebble Beach Golf Course, a trail to the beach and ramps down the beach, as well as visitor-serving facilities near the beach.

But the company would also require reservations to use the parking spaces two weeks in advance and would limit use of the spaces during certain periods, including the Crosby Pro-Am golf tournament.

Beach visitors would not be allowed to move equipment from the parking lot to the beach between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Supervisors agreed to wait until Dec. 13 to consider the plans so the company can present its proposals in written form and until the membership of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association can vote on the Stillwater Cove access policy.

THE PLANNING commission formed a

BUT AFTER LISTENING to the proposal, First District Supervisor Marc Del

CVPOA endorses new Valley master plan

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE NEW Carmel Valley Master Plan received its first endorsement last week, when the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association recommended adoption of the draft plan — with a few changes.

The CVPOA endorsed the plan at its regular monthly meeting at Los Laureles Lodge Nov. 9.

The Monterey County Planning Commission is scheduled to open hearings on the new draft plan at its meeting Nov. 29 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Endorsement by the CVPOA board was unanimous last week, but it also recommended changes in air pollution and traffic policies in the plan that would toughen restrictions on development in Carmel Valley if certain standards are exceeded.

For instance, the CVPOA recommended that a 12-month building moratorium be called when atmospheric oxidant levels in the Valley are recorded at .10 parts per million for three days in any one calendar month.

The master plan adopted by a citizens' advisory committee this summer states: "Whenever records for August, September and October of a given year include 20 hours (or more) of 0.1 ppm (or more) of (atmospheric) oxidants, the county shall immediately hold public hearings to consider limitation of further development in the master plan area."

The language proposed by the CVPOA is similar to a policy urged by Earl Moser, a Carmel Valley resident who has maintained air pollution records for several years. Moser recommended his policy statement at a citizens' advisory committee meeting earlier this year.

The new draft of the master plan also calls for public hearings to consider limitation of development in the Valley when traffic levels reach "level F," but the CVPOA recommended that the public hearings should be triggered by evidence of "level E" traffic.

Bill Bokemeier, an engineering technician for the Monterey County Public Works Department, said that "level E" is considered an "unstable flow" in which traffic is occasionally stopped for short duration.

"Level F" traffic is considered a "forced flow" and traffic is stopped longer than for level E, Bokemeier said. "When it reaches that point, you'd be better off walking," he said.

He added that levels of traffic would never be consistent down the entire stretch of Carmel Valley Road, since traffic is more severe in some segments than others.

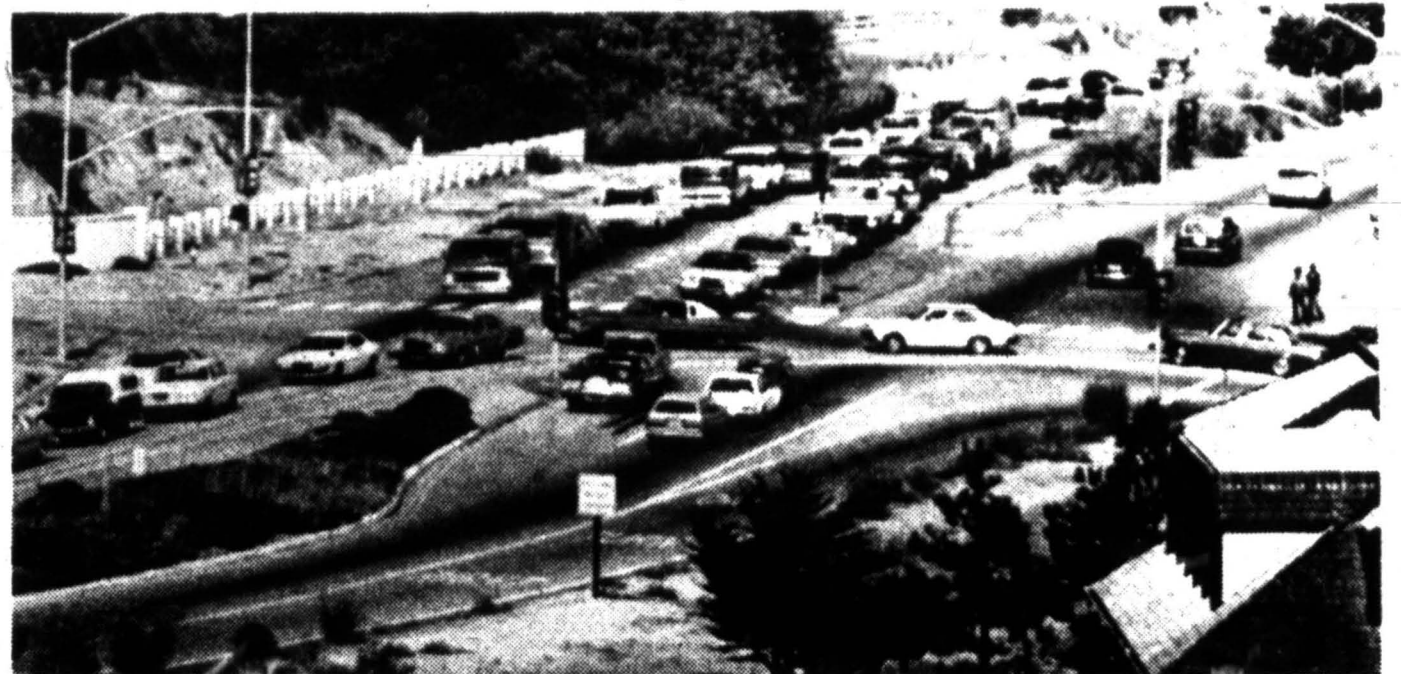

He also said he does not know what the existing levels of traffic on segments of Carmel Valley Road are now because traffic level studies have not been done on Monterey County roads in years. They are done, he said, "when somebody asks for them, like the board of supervisors."

Otherwise, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board of directors accepted the master plan with little other comment.

DIRECTOR Robert Greenwood noted that CVPOA directors said they were convinced the master plan was a "reasonable compromise."

Three CVPOA directors — including Greenwood, Mary Ann Matthews and Glen Ghang — were members of the citizens' advisory committee that drafted the new master plan.

The latest revision to the master plan is the result of a Monterey County Superior Court decision to require an environmental impact report on the plan several weeks after the original master plan was approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors in CONGESTION on Carmel Valley Road, such as the line-up at the intersection of Carmel Rancho Boulevard (above), is a major concern of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. Last week, association officials endorsed the draft Carmel Valley 1980.

Judge Richard Silver also imposed a moratorium on the issuance of discretionary use permits for building in Carmel Valley until a master plan that takes EIR recommendations into account is approved.

Completion of the EIR coincided with the completion of the Monterey County General Plan. The latest citizens' advisory committee, appointed by Monterey County Planning Commissioner Gary Varga late last year, was responsible for including EIR recommendations and general plan policies into the old plan.

The new draft master plan retains the potential 2,500-unit buildout for the 20-year life of the plan.

Master Plan that will be considered by the Monterey County Planning Commission later this month, but it also recommended stronger language in policies that could stop development in Carmel Valley when pollution and traffic reach certain levels.

"The Carmel Valley development limit shall consist of the existing lots of record, plus 1,600 additional units on sites which shall be subject to the allocation system or included in low and moderate income housing development," the draft plan states.

"When taken together with construction since 1980, this constitutes the 20-year buildout of 2,500 units allowed by this plan."

In other CVPOA matters, Director Al Eisner announced his resignation from the board. Eisner said he is moving to San Francisco.

Cindy Hall, coordinator for CVPOA, said the association board agreed to replace Eisner with the first runner-up in the board election next month.

School board vote still undecided

The race for the final seat on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education still was too close to call at press time, according to the Monterey County Elections office.

The initial returns Nov. 8 indicated apparent victors were Susan Bromfield and Pat Condren with William McCormick edging Robert Fenton for the final seat.

However, after counting about 290 absentee ballots, the elections office reported the next afternoon that Fenton held a one-vote lead over McCormick.

The elections office has since launched a canvassing of selected precincts to determine a winner. Those results are not expected to be released until today (Nov. 17) or tomorrow.

Based on information provided by the elections office, the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Nov. 10 inaccurately reported that McCormick had captured the third seat.

America often gets surprised

By JAMES RESTON
N.Y. Times News Service

ONE OF THE odd things about the conduct of U.S. foreign and military policy in the last 50 years is why we are so often taken by surprise.

The tragedy of the Marines in Lebanon is merely the latest example. The Pentagon cannot explain why, after the U.S. Embassy in Beirut was blown up six months ago by a hostile bomb squad, it was then surprised when a wayward truck was able to get through the security lines at the Beirut airport and murder more than 200 Marines in the night.

The State Department is "surprised" when it is asked why the Marines were there in the first place, or what their mission is there now. It is surprised by the doubts of the allies over the Reagan administration's invasion of Grenada, in violation of its commitments under the United Nations Charter and the nonintervention promises of the Organization of American States.

The two main charges against the Reagan administration now are that it is incompetent militarily and incoherent politically, that it is unable to defend its troops or define what they're doing either in Lebanon or in Grenada.

President Reagan tried to answer the criticism of political confusion by insisting that both in Lebanon and in Grenada he was opposing a Soviet-backed conspiracy to take over both countries.

This has been precisely Reagan's theme ever since he came to the White House and long before: that all the foreign problems of this country are the result of the wicked Russians and all its domestic problems the fault of the wicked Democrats.

He is surprised by the growing opposition to this simplistic nonsense. But in fairness, he is not the first American president to be startled by events he didn't foresee.

For half a century, presidents have been surprised by the very things they have predicted and deplored. Even in the midst of the brutal Second World War when President Roosevelt denounced the dictatorships in vivid Reagan-style rhetoric, it never occurred to him that the Japanese would dare to bomb Pearl Harbor and destroy the U.S. Pacific Fleet, bobbing and sleeping at its docks.

Likewise, President Truman and General MacArthur simply assumed that they could send American power beyond the 38th parallel in the Korean War and that when they approached the Chinese border, the Chinese would not intervene. But they did, with their massive manpower, and Harry, with his usual common sense, withdrew.

THERE WERE other surprises. President Kennedy, dead now these 20 years, thought that with a lot of Central Intelligence Agency money, a few airplanes and a little bit of luck, he could get rid of Fidel Castro. But it didn't work out that way at the Bay of Pigs.

President Johnson was surprised when he discovered that his modern military weapons did not compel the peasant armies of North Vietnam to surrender, and, in a way, President Carter may have made a similar mistake.

The guess here is that the historians will be kinder to Jimmy Carter than were the journalists of his time. Like other presidents, Carter was surprised, though in a different way.

He was and is a deeply religious man, a true believer, but ironically he was surprised to find that people of another faith in Iran would capture his embassy and take his people hostage for more than 400 days. And Carter was even more surprised when, as they finally tried to rescue the hostages, his helicopters ran into one another in the desert.

So what? I think this country is really good at big things, when the American people are united and paying attention, but not very good at all with the grubby details of important things.

The problem around Washington, and it's probably not much different "out there," is that we think we can deal with all these problems without fighting. All we have to do is "show up" with all our military power, most of which we can't use.

In diplomatic terms, the important thing is to present an American "presence." After all, everybody knows we're the big boy on the block. Nobody would dare try to blow up the Marine barracks in Beirut.

That's what MacArthur thought when he went north to the Yalu River in Korea, and what General Westmoreland thought when he went north in Vietnam until he later ran into CBS. And what Reagan thought when he sent the Marines into Lebanon and Grenada, and the Navy to stroll off the Caribbean and Pacific shores of Nicaragua.

Just show the flag! An "American presence" will be enough. And sometimes it is — in little islands like Grenada.

Business Beat*Code officer faces challenge

By FLORENCE MASON

MARY Jahr-Purvis, Carmel's first code enforcement officer, has her work cut out for her. According to Bob Griggs, director of planning and building for the city, the first year will be a learning experience for her and for the city.

Mrs. Jahr-Purvis' "beat" is enforcement of all city building and zoning codes. Until the city council decided that the planning and building department was not staffed adequately for active enforcement of those codes, violations were investigated on a "complaint only" basis.

Beginning yesterday, officially, Mrs. Purvis started getting out into the Carmel business community to talk with owners and managers of businesses about their licenses, signs, and other matters. She will have a particular interest in the licensing of branch or secondary businesses, according to the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board.

For the present, she will be concerned only with provisions of those ordinances already on the books under planning and building. Eventually, however, there will be additional requirements spelled out under police and business license ordinances.

This year, the Carmel Police Department has taken responsibility for delivering notices to those businesses still delinquent in payment of their business license fees. This activity will also be handled by Mrs. Jahr-Purvis in the future.

When the new code enforcement officer's duties were discussed during a recent meeting of the business license board, Fire Chief Bob Updike commented that Carmel also will have a new city attorney "who may have different policies" for her to work under.

FACTS ABOUT CARMEL BUSINESSES

Speaking of business licenses, the Carmel Business Association's November Newsletter contains some interesting facts about business in Carmel. The number of businesses with gross receipts less than $100,000 for the year decreased from 224 in 1980-81 to 175 in 1982-83, with a corresponding reduction of approximately $4,000 in license fees collected.

Businesses which grossed $100,000 or more went up from 255 to 260 in the same period, with an increase of more than $10,000 in fees collected. Among those were 17 businesses that grossed more than $1 million in 1980-81 and 18 in 1982-83. The total amount of money collected in license fees rose from $193,514 in the first year to $197,639 in the second.

There were 42 "professionals" who contributed license fees to the city's coffers in 1980-81 and 44 the next year. Adding "fixed fee" businesses in specific locations, "in and about" businesses and new businesses, the total number of licensed businesses in Carmel was 1,054 in 1980-81 and 1,040 in 1981-82. The biggest decrease was among those businesses grossing from $25,000 to $100,000.

One more interesting fact: In spite of the overall decline in the number of licensed businesses in Carmel, the number of new businesses rose from 103 to 115 in the two-year period.

ONE OF THE NEW ONES

The word "topiary" has roots in both Greek and Latin. Its relevance in Carmel is that Richard Hinton is the owner of one of 1983's new businesses — a shop on San Carlos Street that will feature topiary work. Yes, that's designing and sculpturing potted plants into whatever shapes the customer wants.

Hinton, a team, will call his shop Tutto Bella, which roughly translated from Italian, means "everything beautiful." It will open toward the end of this month in "The Mall" on San Carlos north of Sixth Avenue, where Golf Arts and Imports has been. It's just a question of when Golf Arts completes its move to its new location on Dolores Street.

Most of my information about Tutto Bella — and, in fact, about topiary art — comes through Oliver Ray at Excalibur Real Estate. The affable Ray represented Hinton before the business license board and is helping him through the shoals of business in Carmel and to coordinate the moves with Mike Roseto of Golf Arts. However, Ray told me Hinton owns a home on Yankee Point, south of Carmel, and plans to move to this area. His partner in the enterprise is another Texan, Anthony Carbone.

Tutto Bella will not sell cut flowers, and the shop's living potted plants will not be for rent to offices or homes. All will be for sale. In addition, about 10 percent of the shop's business will probably be in home furnishings — plant stands, for example — that relate to its basic business.

Back to that word "topiary." Its Greek origin is the word "topos," meaning place, which my authority (Oliver Ray) said evolved into "topology," the association of ideas with places or things.

The Latin word is topiarius, "concerning an ornamental garden." In Rome it was most often used to define mural decorations of a fanciful character.

ON "THE SPOT"

There's another new business — a hairdressing salon — under the windmill at The Barnyard. And its owner, Lillian Smith, came to Carmel from Cape Town, South Africa.

The fact that her new husband, Tony Smith, had lived here all his life brought Lilly to Carmel and The Barnyard three months ago. Included in her background is a three-year apprenticeship with Vidal Sassoon and experience as the personal hairdresser to entertainers.

She calls her shop The Spot. It is open seven days each week.

Husband Tony is in real estate on the peninsula. And if Lilly needs business advice she also can check with Tony's mother, Haruko Smith, owner of her own dress shop in The Crossroads mall for the past 10 years.

M.L. STERN ON THE MOVE — AGAIN

The third time should be the charm for M.L. Stern and Co. The firm, which specializes in tax-free municipal bonds, has just moved to much larger quarters at Carmel Center Place behind The Crossroads. It's their third move in Carmel in just five years.

The company opened its first offices here in October of 1978 on Carmel Rancho Boulevard. That was 950 sq. ft. — sufficient space for manager Fred Cartier and three brokers. But it soon proved to be inadequate. Just a year-and-a-half later, the firm moved to 2,600 sq. ft. of space, to accommodate 12 account executives. Now it's a whole building with 7,000 sq. ft. and 35 account executives.

The company's main office is in Beverly Hills and Stern has five offices in California. The local success story has been engineered by Cartier, vice president and manager. He first heard about Carmel in 1955, but said it took him 23 years "to find a way to get here permanently."

AND TWO NEW PROFESSIONALS

Dr. George Weilepp was out of breath when I talked to him in his new offices in the Gamble Building on Junipero. That was because he was in the midst of remodeling the offices for himself and his associate, Dr. William Snell. And he was enjoying it.

"I've had a house in Pebble Beach nearly 18 years," he said. "And I'm delighted to be living and working in the same community now." He is a much-travelled physician, just back from China with his wife, Peggy, and a group from Harvard. Dr. Weilepp had been asked by the State Department to teach orthopedics in Chinese medical schools.

His own schooling included Amherst College, the University of Rochester in New York (medical school) and three intern and residency programs — at the University of Oregon, the University of Washington and the University of California,

CARLA THROGMORTON on her Nov. 8 birthday was busy working in Seasons clothing shop downtown when she heard the Carmel High School band playing the rock song Eye of the Tiger while marching down Ocean Avenue. "That really fooled me because I didn't think it was for me. They weren't playing Happy Birthday," Ms. Throgmorton said. But it was for her. The band struck up Happy Birthday, the television cameras popped out and "boy was I surprised." The hoopla was masterminded by Roxy Rapp and Michelle Machette, co-owners of Seasons. Asked her age, Ms. Throgmorton laughed and said: "Do I have to tell? Let's just say 29 and holding." (Michael Gardner photo.)

San Francisco. After that he spent several years in Korea as an orthopedic surgeon.

Then it was practice in San Francisco (with vacations on the Monterey Peninsula) and for seven years he was an instructor in orthopedics at UCSF. To all that he added a second office in Burlingame.

One of George Weilepp's instructors in Oregon was a physician named William Snell. Dr. Snell was a full professor of orthopedics at the University of Oregon for 25 years. Now retired, he will contribute "mostly orthopedic consultations" in the new office. He has been on the peninsula two years.

He came when as a widower he married "a school chum," Barbara, who had lived here 12 or 13 years. It was natural for the couple to return to her home — and a place both greatly enjoy — when Snell decided to retire.

His energetic partner said Dr. Snell "hopes he isn't going to work as hard as I am!" Dr. Snell confirmed that he may not, although he expects to be busy enough as a consultant. If he does have some spare time he will make good use of his pilot's license and the plane he keeps at the local airport. He is also an avid fly fisherman.

Dr. Weilepp and his family prefer to get about on horseback. They have had a horse for 20 years and daughter Annie has taken part in equestrian activities in Pebble Beach. She is heading for a career in astronautic physics at Princeton.

Steve Weilepp is a student at Crocker School in Hillsborough. The family is rounded out by Peggy Weilepp's two sons — Jake, who is at Aptos High, and Clay, a senior at U.C. Santa Cruz.

George Weilepp spoke for both doctors when he said: "We've had such a nice welcome in the community. It's great to be here." Joining the duo after the first of the year will be a cardiologist who is a retired admiral.

CATCHING UP

The newest associate at the National Bank of Carmel is Controller Thomas R. Abert.

Abert came to this area in 1976 as a member of the staff of Deloitte Haskins and Sells in Salinas, after he worked for that company in its San Francisco office. He is commuting from his home in Gilroy "for the present."

Abert said he is the only member of his family who doesn't ride one of their three horses. Wife Georgia and the couple's three children — Jennifer, Tommy and Bradley ("B.J.") — enjoy riding while Abert settles for reading and golf.

Bruce and Olive Grimes are busier than usual at their Seven Seas card shop on Dolores Street south of Ocean Avenue — but not because of cards, as such (except Christmas cards — barrels of those have arrived).

The shop has acquired merchandise from two Carmel businesses that recently closed. When new cabinets have been completed (perhaps by the time you read this) you can see the lovely floral trivets William Ober featured in his shop. Also, two lines from the Cypress Gift Shop: Morin's shorebirds and Seymour sculptures. The birds are all made from natural woods, often several different kinds of wood for a single piece. They are lovely to look at, and just ask to be stroked.

The Underworld, intimate apparel shop on San Carlos Street north of Seventh Avenue, is the merchant of the month at Great Western Savings (Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue). There is a nice selection of gowns, robes and slips on display.

I like something else The Underworld does. Its cards — a supply of which is provided with the display at Great Western — include a list of "her sizes" which friends or relatives can fill in and keep as a shopping reminder — not just for intimate apparel but also for shoes, gloves and coats. Nice idea!

It's open! And advertising such interesting items as "Miniature invasion: Queen's coronation carriage and 200 military miniatures." That's Mead's Books, on Lincoln Street across from the Wayfarer Church.

The new shop is in Bonnymead Court, "tucked away" in the Meads' own courtyard. It features first editions — English and American literature — as well as art, architecture, illustrated books and prints. The hours are noon to 5 p.m.

Carmel welcomed Anne and Orval Mead back from their primary home in Niagara on the Lake, which Anne described as "the oldest village in Canada."

Community-minded San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan has announced another service — this one for their customers. They have made available an electric engraver with which customers can put identifying marks and numbers on all their "valuables, portables or lendables" such as televisions, radio, stereo units, bicycles and tools. To borrow this equipment, customers can contact either the Carmel-by-the-Sea office on Junipero Avenue or the Carmel Rancho office. There is no charge for the service.

Similar equipment continues to be available for all Carmel residents at the Carmel Police Department.

A picture of Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend is soon to be featured in the Indianapolis Star. The reason? Betty Voris, who used to live in these parts, does public relations work and came up with a connection between Carmel, Ind. and Carmel, Calif. (in addition to their having the same name): both have woman mayors.

I don't know what else the two Carmels might have in common. When I find out (through a copy of the article about the mayors) I will share it with you.

Mrs. Voris now works out of offices in San Francisco and travels all over the country — including the suburbs of Indianapolis.

The now-I've-seen-everything department:

As an inveterate garage-sale goer, I thought I had seen everything. But last weekend, at a Sunday sale on North Casanova, was...a pair of dentures! The sign said, "hardly worn" and they did appear to be in very good condition. Pursuing my reporting bent, I inquired about their presence there and was told: "Oh, they are my mother-in-law's; she put them there."

Another of Carmel's fascinating businesses — garage sales.

Pine Whispers

Hospital Auxiliary gift fair exciting

By SUSAN CAROL CANTRELL

A host of elves, dressed appropriately in red smocks, give to the patients the spirit of Christmas all year round.

I speak of the volunteers of the Monterey Peninsula Community Hospital who were once called "pink ladies." That appellation has changed this year, as aid may be, and is now, enlisted from the male sector.

Many of these nearly 440 active members of the Auxiliary of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula were present and busy at their Annual Gift Fair Nov. 11 and 12.

The fair is for active auxiliary members and the medical and nursing staff and employees, as well as friends and families of the hospital.

"We were so successful last year that we decided to extend the fair one more day. This is the first time we've had it at night and everything's a trial," said fair chairwoman Marguerite Temple of Carmel, who organized the event with Marion Robotti of Carmel, "director-at-large."

"We're learning," Marguerite said of the inappropriately placed buffet tables and merchandise, which was displayed under dim lights. However, it didn't seem to deter any of the guests, who walked out with gifts by the bushels. The S.F.B. Morse Fountain Court was beautifully decorated with poinsettias.

All the merchandise was special-ordered by the gift shop and included: a huggable menagerie of stuffed toys from Afghan hounds to moose, games, toys, books, candy, collectibles and even tiny tool sets. But one of the highlights was the luxurious lingerie, modeled throughout the affair, and "practically bought right off the models' backs," Marguerite said.

Formerly, the gift shop was run by volunteers but Louise Dandois of Monterey was hired and is now paid as an assistant to relieve the load from volunteers.

Volunteers are invaluable at the hospital and serve on the desks, at the snack bar and library, transport patients to and from X-ray and serve in many other areas.

"President (Tom) Tonkin (president and administrator of the hospital) treats us as if we're a gift from heaven," said Marguerite, who has always enjoys volunteer work but "never like I do here. The people here as so generous I get back more than I give every day. I never waste my time here."

Betty Welge of Pebble Beach, auxiliary president, worked with the Carmel Foundation for years and had to quit there eventually because her new post at the hospital became a full-time job.

Their "trial" nighttime fair was a sell-out and not a dab of fruit, cheese or wine has left at closing time, which promised that the next day's event would be equally successful.

SPECIAL GIFT DELIVERED TO NATIVE CARMELITES

A bright clear October moon ushered a wonderful baby daughter into the lives of Jana and Steven Johnson of the Carmel Highlands at 7:46 p.m., Oct. 25. Lovely Daphne enthusiastically broke the silence at Community Hospital.

Red-haired, blue-eyed Daphne weighed in at 7 lbs., 4 oz. She is the third grandchild of Neil and Kraig Weston of the Carmel Highlands, and the first for Stan and Mary Johnson of Pebble Beach.

The family pets, Meadows, Molly and Olive, welcomed Daphne home with barks and meows.

The happy family, including pets, will soon see you at beach!

WINE TASTING PARTY

Junipero Serra Parents Club gave their annual wine tasting party and silent auction at the Mission Ranch Barn Nov. 6 and, according to Sheila Elischer of Del Rey Oaks, chairwoman with Barbara Sheridan of Monterey and Terry Royster of Pebble Beach, it was a "financial success." The affair was catered by Carmel Fifth Ave. Deli and wines were donated by J. Lohr and Jekel Vineyards.

SOROPTIMISTS MEET

The Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay had their Nov. 9 business meeting at the Pine Inn and each member pledged to serve a minimum of three hours with the Salvation Army. This will include collecting food items, packing food baskets for the needy and shopping trips with needy children. New members include Megan Terry of Carmel, owner of the Carmel Stamp and Coin Shop, which she recently purchased from her father.

CARNES/MCCALL WEDDING

Wedding bells rang on Nov. 11 for Kim Marie Carnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Carnes of Salinas, and Gordon Sims McCall, son of Mrs. Bruce Dawson of Carmel and the late Clifford H. McCall Jr. of New York City. The couple was married by Rev. Clifford Wilson of Pacific Grove at Erdman Memorial Chapel in Pebble Beach, and will make their new home in Carmel.

JOANNE NIX

Carmelite returns on special mission from U.S. government

Joanne and Dudley Nix of Carmel are pleased that their daughter Joanne Nix has come back to Carmel — and in no mean capacity.

Joanne has been asked by the United States Information Agency, for whom she is a writer and reporter, to cover a series of lectures this week (Nov. 15-18) at the Monterey Institute of International Studies and the Ramada Inn, on the subject of Afghanistan. Many prominent "political thinkers" are invited from around the country.

Joanne's mother, who is the director of dance at Santa Catalina School, and her father, who owns the Carmel Ballet Academy, were very surprised by her assignment, as she has never been assigned outside of Washington, D.C. before.

"There's no telling where she'll go from here," said her father. "She is a fluent linguist — speaks French, Spanish, Hebrew — and so language is no barrier to her."

Ms. Nix usually only gets home at Christmas and was unable to do so last year because she was in Israel. "She works so hard; she's earned it!" said her father.

Joanne has truly earned her position of importance through an incredible sequence of challenging occupations.

"Everything I have done is because I answered job descriptions that I was qualified for," said Joanne, who professes that "literacy, a little knowledge of word processors and a bit of luck" can get a person the job they want.

"Everything I did just seemed to lead to the next," she said, "and my background isn't political either."

She graduated from Santa Catalina and taught elementary school. She later wrote the society page for the Carmel Pine Cone and, in 1969, grew to the position of associate editor.

She was 26 years old at that time and had thoughts of joining the Peace Corps, when a friend of the family and ambassador to Mexico suggested that she was a "dilettante" and that she should undertake the varied and interesting work with the United States Information Agency.

"I went to Washington to see what I could learn and there I worked with the Voice of America," Ms. Nix said.

There she became a writer/editor for the Middle Eastern/South Asian Press (the events she reports are not for U.S. consumption but are published only outside the country) and her job entails meeting with dignitaries who visit Washington, D.C.

In her endeavors she has met Mrs. Anwar Sadat, and said of Prime Minister Begin: "I liked him a lot. He talked very courtly." She said of Mother Theresa, that as busy as the woman was with more serious problems she nicely "humored" those who interviewed her.

Recently she covered a memorial for the downed Korean jetliner and said of President Reagan: "I've never been able to talk to him because of the security all around him."

She does, however, converse with the head of the agency, Charles Z. Wick, a friend of Reagan's who, she said, has also been involved in show business — "he produced Snow White and the Three Stooges."

Joanne has been a loyal Carmelite since she left for Washington in 1972 and has continued to give an absentee vote. "I want say-so on things like our library and parks." She also still considers herself a Carmelite and said: "I would rather be living in Carmel."

She is never far away in spirit, however, and says that she still subscribes to the Pine Cone, "a christmas present to myself each year!"

Pre-domino tourney spirited

Incentive was built for the Invitational Domino Weekend on Nov. 12 to benefit the Monterey County Symphony Guild at a pre-tourney cocktail-buffet social, provided by tourney sponsor Merrill Lynch, at the spacious Pebble Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. George Caratan.

Guests juggled drinks and anecdotes in the crowded halls and out on the heated patio, which overlooked a sliver of moon and sweeping expanse of ocean and manicured golf greens.

Prospective contestants jostled one another about previous encounters and Rod Dewar of Pebble Beach — who played with his wife in the first domino tournament 20 years ago and married her the next year — said: "They got down to the last prize and it had to be shared, so they gave it to us as a wedding gift." He also said the prize was an inlaid domino box, "made by Bill Rissel, who used to be postmaster of Pebble Beach."

Henri Corbat and his wife Ghity, donors of a pair of domino charms for the prize winner, greeted friends at the affair and said Ghity will perform a piano recital at the Monterey Conference Center on Dec. 2.

Leslie Henderson of Carmel, vice president of the Monterey County Symphony Guild and co-chairman, along with Mrs. John Andrews of Pebble Beach, said: "I'm delighted that we're getting so much support for our symphony even from Marin and San Benito Counties. It's an excellent symphony, as people know."

Petit fours, iced in the fashion of dominoes, cheeses and corned beef sandwiches, and lots of ribbing, were enjoyed at the social.

HOST AND HOSTESS Mr. and Mrs. George Caratan of Pebble Beach welcomed Domino Tournament contestants at the pre-tourney social given in their lovely home Nov. 11.

ALIDA DAVIS of Pebble Beach (left), mailing chairwoman for the Monterey County Symphony Guild and "essential cog," chatted with Leslie Henderson of Carmel, vice president of the guild.

How to cope with Thanksgiving stress

By FAMILY SERVICE AGENCY

LAST WEEK, a client said: "I hate the holidays. In two weeks it will be Thanksgiving Day. That day is always a mess. It's a lot of work and expense. My family bolts down the meal in 15 minutes. I'm so depressed when it's over."

I had to agree with her that for many people, the Thanksgiving Day holiday is the "pits." Many people are depressed, lonely, upset, unhappy and certainly not thankful. It is nearly predictable that Thanksgiving Day is one of the most stress-filled times of the year.

Therapists and counselors are prepared for extra clients and patients in the next two weeks and most of them will say they are depressed because of the holidays. Self-help groups also offer their clients programs and lectures on "how to cope with holiday stress." Whatever happened to the fun and joy associated with this holiday?

Perhaps we can see what has happened, if we take a look backward. In our childhood, we remember the holidays and the good times we had. Everyone who we loved or cared for was present. If there were some absent, it was for a good reason and they had "sent their love."

As young children, we were not aware of the stress and tension that was present then also. Usually the undercurrents were kept quiet and lots of issues were unspoken. Young children are the same way today. They simply don't pick up on the stress of the day.

The reality of stress is not something new to the 1980s, as some might think. Therefore, it is not a question of whether or not there will be stress. It is a fact. Stress will be present. The question is: how will the stress be handled?

In preparing to handle the stress of the holidays, one good place to start is to ask yourself what your expectations are for Thanksgiving Day. It is interesting to note the name used for this national holiday. For example, some will call it "Thanksgiving Day." Others, however, will call it "Turkey Day." Still others will call it "Touch Down Day." And others, like my client, will refer to it as "turn-down" day. Could it be that our expectations are revealed by the name we use for this day?

The "traditional roles" people play on Thanksgiving Day also give us another perspective. Usually the ladies of the house will want Thanksgiving Day to be a day of family gathering. They will cook large amounts of food for their family and friends and expect everyone to leave the table stuffed like the bird was before Le Grand Chief hit it with the power knife.

Typically, the dads and sons of the family will want to listen to or look at good football game or two, or three, or four. (And heaven help the poor wife and mother who doesn't plan to coordinate the dinner of 16 courses served piping hot during half-time.) Also, little children and non-football fans stand to lose their heads when walking between the viewer and the television.

Younger children will want to avoid helping in the kitchen either before or after the meal. During the meal, they will want to eat only what they like. The "I-don't-like-it" comments prevail best when used in front of visitors and guests. The older children also want to avoid helping in the kitchen and will want to have fun, but usually away from the family.

OBVIOUSLY, this description of traditional roles is a caricature. My point is to draw attention to the fact that in every family each person has at least one expectation for Thanksgiving Day. To fail to take these individual expectations into account before the "Big Day," is the mistake most people make at this holiday. Therefore, make a list for yourself: "What are my expectations for Thanksgiving Day? What do I want to do? What do I want to happen on this Thanksgiving Day?" Without this list of expectations, the day is doomed before it starts.

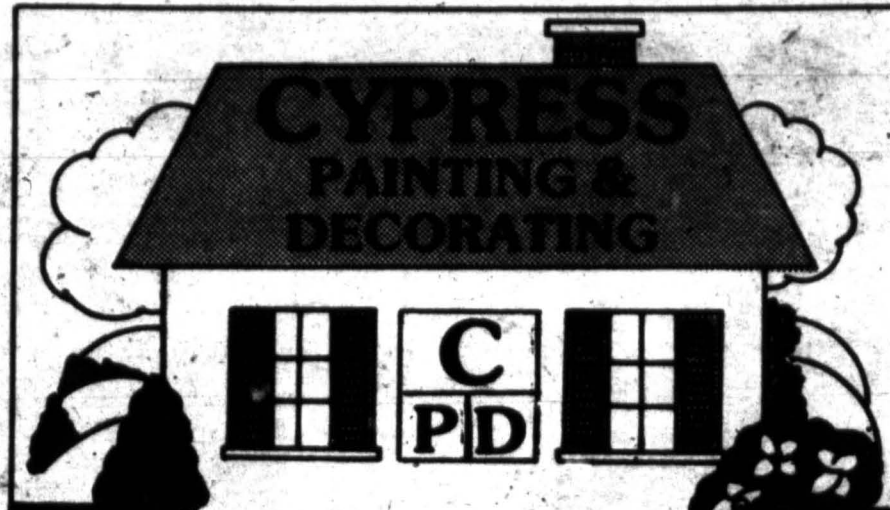

After you have listed your expectations and asked others in your family to do the same, it is then a good time to share those expectations. Here is a list of expectations from one family.

"Father: 1) wants as many family members to be present as possible, especially the grown children; 2) wants to have 'talking time' with family members — both individually and as a group; 3) wants to watch a good football game; 4) wants to help with preparation and cleanup of meal. Mother: 1) wants to attend religious worship service early in morning; 2) wants to prepare a wonderful meal for family; 3) wants to have help from the family for the meal and clean-up; 4) wants to watch a football game. Son: 1) wants to play basketball with visiting older brother; 2) wants to eat a lot of food and especially dessert; 3) wants to watch all the football games; 4) does not want to work in kitchen before or after dinner."

In order to schedule all these different expectations, it is necessary to make a plan and stick to it. It takes negotiation, compromise and sharing to build a plan for the day that will both help everyone feel satisfied their needs are being met and that will help reduce the stress level. Most people do some of this scheduling when they set the time for dinner. But, it works best if everyone's expectations are known before the time for the dinner is set.

As important as planning is, there is one thing that is more important. It is the willingness and ability to flow with the scene and the people and the activities during the day.

When we recognize the presence of stress, state our expectations and adopt an attitude of flexibility, there is only one thing left to do. Remember what the day is all about! Be thankful and give thanks! Happy Thanksgiving from the Family Service Agency of the Monterey Peninsula. 373-4421.

N.Y. Stock Exchange survives the computer age

N.Y. Times News Service

It was the mid-1970s, with electronics becoming the rage, when some Wall Street pundits sounded warnings that the New York Stock Exchange would wither, its tumultuous trading floor to be replaced by quietly humming computers, its majestic building to become a monument of a bygone era.

In this instance, though, the predictions have so far been wrong. The New York Stock Exchange, the outgrowth of sidewalk trading in the 1790s, has continued to thrive, and not even chief competitors predict its demise any time soon.

"I think the news of their death was premature," said Gordon S. Macklin, president of the National Association of Securities Dealers, which runs the competing over-the-counter market. Agreed Paul Kolton, a former chairman of the American Stock Exchange: "It's doing well obviously. The numbers and the record speak for itself."

Indeed, they do. As it did in 1975, the exchange today handles about 85 percent of the trading in New York Stock Exchange-listed shares, and the rest changes hands on competing exchanges or over-the-counter. And as volume soared in the bull market, the New York Stock Exchange handled a record 16.46 billion shares last year, with daily trading reaching as high as 149 million shares with hardly a glitch.

The bottom line has reflected these successes: The exchange's "net revenue," the equivalent of profit, was $8.8 million last year, up 40 percent from 1981.

Although the exchange now faces intensified competition from the NASD's over-the-counter market for new listings, the future of the New York Stock Exchange also looks reasonably bright. Boosting its fortunes recently were decisions by Merrill Lynch & Co., parent of the nation's largest brokerage firm, to pull out of two experimental trading systems that loomed as threats to the New York exchange.

It was the middle 1970s when many people who follow Wall Street were hardly sanguine about the future of the exchange. Referred to as "the Club," the Big Board was criticized not only as obsolescent but also as self-serving and monopolistic.

For 183 years — until May 1, 1975 — the exchange had mandated fixed commission rates on the purchase and sale of all shares, a lucrative system that by almost all accounts charged too much for trading large blocks of shares.

The exchange's system of specialists was said to be particularly anachronistic.

The specialists' jobs were, and are, frequently passed from father to son. In the case of the New York exchange, 409 individual specialists are grouped into 59 trading units, each handling about 26 stocks. Orders to buy and sell shares are routed through the appropriate specialist on the exchange floor, and his job is to facilitate smooth trading, using his own capital to buy in times of weakness and sell in times of strength. On the average, a specialist intervenes in about one fifth of all transactions.

The thinking in the mid-1970s was that the specialists, and the attendant blizzard of paper and organized chaos on the exchange floor, could be replaced with some sort of "black box." A variety of systems were discussed, but basically a huge central computer system would process buy and sell orders, automatically executing them at the best price, whoever may be offering it. The thought was to reduce the power of the specialists and narrow the spread between bid and offered prices by expanding the ranks of market makers.

Selecting the guardian for your children

By JOHN BURROUGHS AND RICH COSTA
Burroughs, Costa & Associates

IF YOU confront anyone regarding who should be the executor of their estate — or the guardian of their children should they pass away — with hardly a moment of hesitation, most people would refer to their best friend, a close neighbor, or even a close relative.

Actually, most of us give more thought to buying a new car than selecting an executor or guardian. Most individuals, when asked to serve in either one of these capacities are usually extremely flattered and consider it a great honor that you would think to mention them in your will, or make them guardian of your children. Actually they never give thought to the underlying responsibility that is required for these roles.

Before you select an executor, you may want to give some serious thought as to the person's ability to handle the responsibilities of an executor. Remember, the executor of your estate must account for all the assets. That means they have the responsibility to round up everything that is to be appraised or placed in your estate. They must serve in the capacity of notifying all concerned parties of your death, any major creditors, or anyone to whom you may be personally liable for debts.

The executor must also pay all the immediate bills, which can represent funeral expenses, or anything else the estate may owe. The executor is also responsible to calculate the taxes to be paid. If there is a cash shortage, the executor is also responsible to determine which asset must be sold to provide that cash.

For any liquid assets or investable assets, it is also the responsibility of the executor to invest that money to derive income. Also the executor is responsible should the investments they make not perform well.

In addition, the executor is responsible for filing the estate tax return, that includes your federal estate, and local income taxes, as well as anything that must be filed for your estate. The executor is also responsible to distribute the assets. This means even selling some assets, or selecting those assets that must be sold in order to distribute it fairly and equally as you outlined in your will.

The executor is also responsible to account to the court the whereabouts and the value of your assets. As you can see by this outline, your executor will serve as a lot more than a figurehead. Consequently, you may not be as inclined after reading this to appoint your Uncle Harry, who may be a nice guy, but the irresponsible family playboy.

Before you select somebody to be executor, you may want to discuss it with them. Maybe they are not willing to take on the responsibility. If you select someone without their permission and later you pass away, it could conceivably place your estate in the position of having to go back and reappoint another executor which may mean time and money.

PROBABLY one of the most important decisions involves selecting the guardian of your children. All too often, people tend to select someone to be the guardian of their children without really checking out to see if the individual is willing to serve in that capacity.

You may have a close relative or friend who you feel is ideal to serve as guardian. However, they may not be as enthusiastic — not that they may not love your children, but they could be at the point in their life where their children are grown and they may not want to be placed in the position of raising teenagers or raising children again.

Richard Snideman

Private services have taken place for Richard L. Snideman, a resident of Pebble Beach and Rancho Mirage, who died Oct. 29 in his home in Rancho Mirage. He was 77.

An avid and accomplished golfer, he played regularly in such pro-am tournaments as the Bing Crosby and Bob Hope Classic and was winning amateur in the latter in 1962.

During World War II, he served on the War Production Board. When American Coating Mills merged with Owens Illinois two years after the war, he moved to Chicago as a vice president in charge of the Toledo, Ohio-based firm's paper products division.

Survivors include his wife of 48 years, Helen; his two sons and five grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Eisenhower Medical Center in Rancho Mirage or to a charity of the donor's choice.

She is survived by her daughter, Jeanne De Vaughn of Carmel.

Cremation followed the services and the ashes were scattered at sea.

Survivors include her husband, Charles; two daughters, Deborah Brown of St. Paul, Minn., and Kathryn Lenhart of Fayetteville, N.C.; a son, Charles E. French Jr. of Walnut Creek; and five grandchildren.

The Rev. Jerome Politzer, pastor of St. John's Chapel, officiated at the services. Private interment took place in the El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Community Hospital or the Central Mission Trails Chapter of the American Heart Association, 10 San Miguel Ave., Salinas 93901.

Otto Fritsche

Burial took place Nov. 10 in the Monterey City Cemetery for Otto E. Fritsche, a Carmel resident, who died Nov. 7 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a period of failing health. He was 87.

The service will begin with a hymn, and includes Bible readings reflecting the Psalmist's gratitude even in the midst of his turbulent era: "How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God...the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures."

During the hour-long service, the readings will explore the scriptural record of God's "loving kindness." Brief correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be read, including the following excerpt from the chapter on prayer: "God is not moved by the breath of praise to do more than He has already done, nor can the infinite do less than bestow all good, since He is unchanging wisdom and love."

Following these readings, the President's Proclamation, and the Lord's Prayer, time will be set aside for expressions of gratitude to God.

All are welcome at the Thanksgiving service. Child care will be provided for children too young to attend.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Research by the University of California indicates that sociable people are more likely to live longer. A nine-year study of 7,000 aging Americans found that those with fewer social contacts were as much as four times more likely to die of major causes like heart disease, cancer, accidents and suicide than people with strong social associations. Marriage, friends and membership in religious or social groups seem to act as "tonics" to help us live longer.

Father Farrell's wisdom*The rite word

From the May 26, 1983 Carmel Pine Cone/CV Outlook

Oh Almighty and Eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use, and to bless us all to Thy service. Help us to see Thy truths clearly and to avoid self-deception and double talk, especially to Thee.

Before and during World War II, I had a friend, Dr. Joap Wilderbeek of Eindhoven, North Brabant, in the Netherlands. He won his doctorate in philosophy from my University of Fribourg in Switzerland. Like many Dutchmen, he was fluent in five or six languages. However, he had a theory that English was a Dutch dialect.

When he was at loss for a word he invented one, or he would call the word a "dingus." For example, if he wanted a teaspoon he would say, "hand me the dingus in the teetoffel." Showing me several blisters on his hands from rowing a boat on Lake Moratt, he said: "Look on boy, blares on my hands from rowdering." While sitting on the terrace of a hotel some midges bothered him and he said: "Look on boy, the little flicks are kiddling me."

Recently, the Herald reported that a stand-up comedian, Rich Hall, was compiling an unabridged dictionary of invented words for common things without names. He calls them "sniglets." For example, he calls the strange white wrinkles we get on our hands from soaking too long in hot water, "krackles."

Many of us use "sniglets" when we pray for fear we might make a serious commitment to God's law of love to Him and of our neighbor. After all, isn't it easier to "spadoodle" than to "servapalado?" This is not the new Rotary motto, but for many of us it might as well be. It is, I repeat, easier to "spadoodle" than to "servapalado." Amen.

Study session on general plan

The Carmel City Council hopes to complete by the end of November its study sessions on proposed revisions to the 1973 general plan.

The council has scheduled study sessions at 4 p.m. Nov. 22 and Nov. 29 on the general plan. Both meetings will be held at city hall.

Final adoption of the general plan is dependent on whether the council wants more study sessions after the Nov. 29th meeting.

Agendas for the sessions were not available by press deadline. There are several elements to be discussed, including land use, circulation and housing.

The housing element was the topic of some discussion during a joint meeting between the council and planning commissioners Nov. 10. (See related story, this issue.)

Land use probably will be the most controversial element. The council is to discuss general policies on controlling tourist-oriented businesses and restrictions on motels and hotels.

In the circulation element, the council probably will focus on parking restrictions and ways to discourage employer/employee parking downtown and in the residential zones.

When the council reviews the housing element, the major topics of discussion will be low cost housing and how to control the proliferation of large two-story homes.

Once the council adopts policies for inclusion in the general plan revisions, city staff is to develop implementing ordinances that will enforce the policies. Those ordinances will be introduced to the planning commission beginning in early 1984.

Free copies of the proposed revised 1973 Carmel General Plan are available at city hall, east side of Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

Film review

A brilliant, charming film

By MICHAEL GARDNER

Educating Rita. With Michael Caine and Julie Walters. Directed by Lewis Gilbert. Based on a play by Willie Russell. A Columbia Pictures release. Rated PG for adult language.

ABOUT ONCE a year, a rather quiet, unpretentious film comes along to tug at the heartstrings and lift your spirits. Two recent examples of this kind of film are Chariots of Fire and My Bodyguard. In 1983 that film is Educating Rita.

Educating Rita is one of those rare films that successfully combines comedy and drama. It is sad and funny, warm and personal, sarcastic and socially relevant.

It does not rely on the flash and splash of special effects, nudity and violence so prevalent in today's general release films.

Instead, the strengths of Educating Rita lie in brilliant writing and masterful acting.

Based on the long-running London play by Willie Russell, Educating Rita is a social commentary on the mores of society told through the relationship between a cynical alcoholic professor of literature and his newest pupil, a hairdresser named Rita who wants to escape the drudgery of middle class life.

Michael Caine is Dr. Frank Bryant, a paunchy, weary, bearded, sloppily dressed middle-aged failed poet who stashes a bottle of whiskey behind Oscar Wilde's The Lost Weekend.

Sitting behind the desk in front of a poetry class, Frank gazes out the window and questions the relationship to real life of studying "dead poets."

"William Blake. Do you know what he is? He's a dead poet. That's all," Frank tells his pupils. "The sun is shining. You're all young. What are you doing here?"

Although the whimsical thought is posed to his students, it is really himself that he questions.

One day, a ghastly-dressed Rita in pink mini-skirt, white blouse and clackity high heels walks into his office. She is bright-eyed, eager to learn, and a perfect catalyst to the tired Frank.

Rita is actually named Susan, a 26-year-old housewife whose husband Denny wants her for a baby-making machine. Taking the name Rita, she wants to use the "open university" program as an escape from the prison of middle class life.

NEWCOMER Julie Walters, who played the title role on the London stage, is a rare find for films and should be able to pick her roles after producers view her performance here.

Walters perfectly plays the gamut of emotions within the complex Rita, who is philosophical yet child-like, worldly-wise yet innocent, eager to grow, yet tied to her husband. She is a joy to watch.

One of the strengths of Educating Rita is its dialogue and ability to allow the audience to discover the characters through discussion rather than visual explanations.

For example, the aforementioned quote from Frank quickly establishes his regard for literature as meaningless in today's world. He is cynical and wants something better for himself, but can't escape.

Rita, who is young and on her way to the escape that Frank so desperately wants, also is identified early through dialogue.

In her first meeting with Frank, she tells him about her job as a hairdresser and the ladies who come in wanting to be made into different people by changing their appearance.

"If you want to change, you have to do it from the inside," Rita says.

To which Frank replies: "All I know is I know absolutely nothing."

At first Frank tries to discourage her. He wants to steer her to another program or another tutor. But then her excitement and her youthful enthusiasm begins to charm him.

He turns to her one day and says: "Rita, why didn't you walk in here 20 years ago?" She laughs and says: "I don't think they would have accepted me at the age of six."

From this point the film focuses on Rita's growth as a person, and in a broader scope, touches on society's view of women and their roles.

The statements are made simply and candidly. After fleeing a fancy dinner party at Frank's house, Rita goes to a pub where her parents and Denny are singing. Her mother turns to her and says: "There must be better songs to sing."

Educating Rita is a poignant, thinking person's film that not only is entertaining, but has a message about society and ourselves.

It definitely rates a "must see" on anyone's list.

What's playing at the movies

A Christmas Story: With Darren McGavin, Melissa Dillon and Peter Billingsley. The story is based on a childhood memoir by humorist Jean Shepherd in his book In God We Trust, All Others Pay Cash. It's a typical off-center Shepard comedy with 1930s childhood memories from a youthful point of view. The setting is Indiana in the 1940s and the action focuses almost entirely on our young hero who wants, more than anything else in the world, a Red Ryder Carbine-Action, Two-Hundred-Shot Range Model Air Rifle. For Christmas, that is. Rated PG. At the Regency Theatre.

All the Right Moves: Tom Cruise stars as Stef Djordjevic, a senior high school football player determined to land an athletic scholarship and live a full life with his girlfriend, Lisa, played by Lea Thompson. Rated R. At the Crossroads Cinema.

Amityville 3-D: Thanks to the new Arriflex 3-D system, audiences will not only witness the Amityville terror, they will become involved in the horror. Tony Roberts stars as a magazine writer assigned to investigate a seance held at the notorious Amityville, New York house (he ends up buying the house — and its demons); Candy Clark is his photographer; Tess Harper is his estranged wife and Robert Joy is the psychic researcher who encounters more than he bargains for in the basement well. It is not a sequel to the pictures The Amityville Horror or Amityville II: The Possession. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

The Big Chill: A show about a group of seven old friends who reunite for the funeral of Alex, one of their pals, who has committed suicide. Chilled by this intimation of their own mortality, each begins to question his or her life. With Kevin Kline, Glenn Close, JoBeth Williams, Mary Kay Place, Tom Berenger, Jeff Goldblum and William Hurt. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema.

Brainstorm: Christopher Walken, Natalie Wood, Louise Fletcher and Cliff Robertson star in this thrilling tale about a revolutionary invention: a recording machine which, when linked with sophisticated brain wave sensors and fifth-generation computer technology, can read and record every physical, emotional and intellectual sensation as it is experienced by an individual, making those sensations available to be re-experienced in their entirety by another person. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Deal of the Century: Stars Chevy Chase, Sigourney Weaver and Gregory Hines as arms dealers who sell second-rate weapons to third world nations, but they're not out to stick it to anyone. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Golden Seal: Torquil Campbell portrays a youth smitten with the charms of a rare pelagic mammal. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough Theatre.

Mr. Mom: When rising young executive Jack Butler is handed his pink slip at the office, it's a pass into a strange new world. He swaps his briefcase for his wife Caroline's apron so that she can bring home the bacon while he is introduced to the joys of motherhood. With Michael Keaton and Teri Garr. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Nate and Hayes: It was a vintage year for slave-mongers, dogooders, murderers and "bully" Hayes. Starring Tommy Lee Jones and Michael O'Keefe. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Never Say Never Again: Sean Connery returns after 13 years to play the suave 007 in a remake of Thunderball which he starred in 18 years ago. He is in fit form to tangle with the infamous organization SPECTRE and its nuclear terrorism in a complicated, fast-moving plot. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Richard Pryor Here and Now: A performance film by the talented comedian. He wrote and directed this concert film which was shot during three sold-out performances last August in New Orleans. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Rear Window: An Alfred Hitchcock classic with veteran actor James Stewart and the late Grace Kelly. It is a clean, fresh print of Hitchcock's dark, voyeuristic masterpiece. Stewart is an adventurous photojournalist confined by a broken leg to a small New York apartment where he restlessly watches the neighbors through his window and gradually discovers what appears to be a cleverly executed murder. Rated PG. At the Crossroads Cinema.

The Right Stuff: The story of the first seven Mercury astronauts in outer space inspired this film version of Tom Wolfe's witty book which examines the discrepancy between fact and media fiction about the heroes. The film blends NASA and other archival footage, dramatic action and special effects into a three hour epic story. Rated PG. At Cinema 70.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: The cult classic where two teenagers, Brad and Janet, meet Dr. Frankfurter, a Transylvanian transvestite. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

Running Brave: Robby Benson stars in the true-life story of Billy Mills, whose victory in the 10,000 meter race in the 1964 Olympics was one of the biggest upsets in sports history. The film traces his journey from an impoverished South Dakota reservation to his Gold Medal-winning performance in Tokyo. Rated PG. At the Crossroads Cinema.

Under Fire: Three American photo-journalists are caught up in the fatal drama, the complexity and the violent romance of the 1979 Sandinista revolution in Nicaragua. With Nick Nolte, Gene Hackman and Joanna Cassidy. Rated R. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

HOLLEE FARMER will present a program of songs and poems at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20 in Cherry Hall.

Poet and singer

Hollie Farmer in concert here

Hollie Farmer will present her second program of song-poems at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20 in Cherry Hall on Guadalupe Street and Fourth Avenue, Carmel.

Her new work, Rippling — the Face of God includes original songs performed with the guitar or autoharp. She has performed at Oasis Center in Chicago and San Francisco.

Ms. Farmer lived for two years at Esalen Institute where she wrote and performed her works and sang at the dedication of the Henry Miller Memorial Library in Big Sur.

"I like to do portraits in music on request, drawing forth the highest essence of an individual in pitch, melody, rhythm and word, as a psychic reading," she said.

The recital is free and open to the public. Refreshments will be served. For reservations or more information, phone 624-7491.

Symphony sets new standards

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

WHILE THE Monterey County Symphony has matched its promise in a variety of shorter essays, overtures, tone poems and suites, it established its highest standards ever in true symphony Sunday night at King Hill.

The Sibelius Symphony No. 2 in D, a work that nearly makes a contest between the strings and the wind band, saw the ensembles rise beyond themselves to a sustained urgency whose biting edge and brooding essence were directed with purpose from the podium.

Carter Nice, Sacramento Symphony conductor, clearly had the score well in mind and, as this season's only guest conductor used his performing experience and his knowledge of this piece to draw unprecedented energy and large-scale focus from our orchestra.

Of course guest conductors naturally take the works they know best when they tour. Nice's only apparent exception to the rule was the soloist-dictated Concierto Pastoral and the long-term measure of his talents we may never see. For that matter, such areas as line, texture and rhythm all suffered occasional doubt and contradictions, in the Sibelius, just as the resources of the orchestra occasionally showed old habits (the trumpets tended to let the last notes of their phrases fade away too soon), but the refreshingly well-crafted form and drama forgave any number of minor sins.

Flutist Louise di Tullio, a long-time Bach Festival favorite, showed major talent and big sound in a piccolo concerto by Vivaldi and the Joaquin Rodrigo Concierto Pastoral. The latter, composed in 1978 for James Galway, proved to be Nice's weakest moment, of the evening, as the challenge remained that of keeping an intrinsically passive and conspicuously repetitive piece interesting.

Miss di Tullio showed the most leadership with color and variety in the many repeated phrases, and the responding solos from orchestra principal players stood out as brightly, though Nice — especially in the finale — quickly got into the habit of tagging along and losing whatever tension and interpretive variety lay between the lines. In typical Rodrigo fashion, a baroque-style Ritornello borrowed a familiar theme fragment, this one from Strauss' Bourgeois Gentleman.

The opening Roman Carnival Overture by Berlioz showed more bluster than real musical grace, and by the second phrase in the English horn, the pulse had grown wooden and ponderous. But by its end all its flags were flying.

New faces occupied the first chairs of the first and second violins, the violas and the horns, in an apparently temporary circumstance.

DONALD PIPPIN and his merry band turned a cat into a woman on the stage of Steinbeck Forum last Saturday, and neither feminist nor animal lover was heard to protest. In fact, the audience of 150 continually responded with delight and even mirth as Pippin's Pocket Opera took its turn in the Monterey Art Commission series.

Jacques Offenbach's one-act La Chatte Metamorphosee Enfemme traced an ideal line between the buffa style of Rossini and Donizetti and the spoofs of Gilbert and Sullivan, and showed Offenbach's facility in the medium as adroit if a cut less than awe-inspiring. But the comedy and the camp showed the computer as nobody's fool, and Pippin's version for vocal quartet and orchestra of eight began with clear focus and held to it through delicious Italian-style scenes, ensembles and finales.

The vocal resources were both well balanced to one another and clearly professional, with the emphasis rising to the facile and clear soprano of Diane Gilfether who last appeared here in the 1980 Monterey County Symphony production of Die Fledermaus.

The Cat that Turned into a Woman opened with a witty imitation Rossini overture. Edward Cohn as Dig-Dig, the Indian juggler, sang a Turkish styled "Dig-Dig" song, and tenor Eric Morris as Guido reflected on the non-transferable love he felt for his cat Minette now, by necessity, transferred to Minette as a purring, often meowing and occasionally milk-lapping woman.

Miss Gilfether was, of course, Minette, and shared a large number of the production's best moments. The band — string quartet, flute, oboe, clarinet and piano — held up its part in good fashion, and the piece itself had the taste then and remains in the memory now with as much pleasure as a Godiva sampler.

The Pippin Pocket evening got underway with the Badinerie from the Suite in B Minor for flute by Bach, pressed into service as an overture to that composer's Coffee Cantata. The flutist who played it, unnamed in the program, left delight in the air but not enough to prevent a stiff reading of the cantata itself.

The central dancing siciliana aria, with Miss Gilfether, was the only other stand-out. With Pippin at the harpsichord (as he was for the first piece) the flute once again sang sweetly in a chamber quintet by Christian Bach.

Pippin's comments remained as droll as ever and the hour-long Offenbach made the evening particularly worthwhile.

The play is a sophisticated comedy and, in Shaw's own words, a philosophy. It is set in turn-of-the-century England and features actors from the local community as well as professional actors from all over the U.S.

It is peopled with fascinating characters who converse articulately, displaying elegant wit and great vitality. In the show are Michael Flynn, who has performed in Seattle and San Francisco; Nancy Houfek from the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco; Marcia and Gwyneth Hovick of Carmel; Morgan Stock of Monterey and Patricia Cullen of Carmel; Kimberly King as Violet; Marc Clark as Straker; Paul Laramore as Octavius; Edgar Weinstock as Ramsden and Howie Muir who has recently been seen at the Western Stage in Salinas. The play is directed by Howard Malpas, chairman of the CalRep board of trustees and also of the drama department at Mills College in Oakland.

Talley's Folly continues at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19.

Tickets are $8.50 on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday evenings and for the Saturday matinees; $10.50 for Friday and Sunday evenings and $12.50 for Saturday evenings. They are available at the box office or at all Ticketron outlets. For reservations, phone 372-4373.

Studio Theatre Restaurant: presents a comedy by Sam and Bella Spewak, My Three Angels which opens Friday, Nov. 18 with dinner served at 7 p.m. and curtain at 8:30 p.m. and one hour earlier on Sundays. The play will continue Thursday through Sunday through New Year's Eve. The theater is on Dolores Street and Ocean Avenue in Carmel.

The story is of how three badmen — convicts, in fact — became the good angels of a sadly harassed household. The scene is French Guiana, a region where on Christmas Day the temperature drops back to 104 degrees and where convicts can get hired out and not have to report back.

Cost of the dinner and show is $22.50 and a limited number of seats are available at $10 for the show only. For reservations, phone 624-1661.

The next production at the Studio will be Neil Simon's Plaza Suite, which opens Jan. 13. Beginning Dec. 6, the Studio will be open for lunch Tuesdays through Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Lunch prices will start at $3.95.

Z is directed by Costa-Gavras and won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film and was nominated Best Picture of the Year by the National Society of Film Critics. It is the story of a Greek pacifist leader who is struck down by a speeding truck while hundreds of people watched. The police report states accidental death but a journalist's questioning leads to a full scale investigation which includes a mysterious campaign of terror.

Britannia Hospital stars Malcolm McDowell, Joan Plowright and Alan Bates. Rated R. It won the best director prize at the Cannes Film Festival in 1982 and is an outrageous satire on an Empire's decline and fall and nearly everyone's refusal to face the situation.

Umberto D is considered to be the director, Vittorio De Sica's "neo-realism" classic. It is a story about man's inhumanity to man. The hero is based on De Sica's father to whom he dedicated the film.

THE BEST IN contemporary and historic art are on display at Galerie De Tours at its two locations in Carmel, at Pebble Beach and in San Francisco. This painting, by prize-winning watercolorist Arne Westerman, is part of an exhibition of his works on display at the galleries. It is titled Four Women Shoppers.

Westerman's water colors on exhibit at Galerie De Tours

Arne Westerman's prize-winning watercolor scenes are currently on display at Galerie De Tours, at two locations: on Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue and at Sixth Avenue and Dolores Street in Carmel. They are also located on the 17-Mile-Drive in Pebble Beach.

The exhibition is a continuation of the galleries' history of showing contemporary and historic art. Westerman's work is in the tradition of artists whose works have been shown at the galleries as well as in San Francisco, which include such great names as Eastman Johnson, Winslow Homer, Norman Rockwell and more.

Carmel's oldest privately owned galleries and San Francisco's second oldest, under the direction of gallery owner Robert J. Kaller, are noted for investment quality 19th century American and European paintings.

Such groups as "The Eight" (the Ash Can School) and "The Ten," who revolutionized the thrust of American painting in the late 19th century, are regularly featured at Galerie De Tours.

Current examples include Willard Metcalf ("The Ten") and Ernest Lawson ("The Eight.")

Historic Western art has also been featured in the galleries. Currently on exhibit are original works by such famous Western artists as Frederic Remington, Charles Russell and O.C. Seltzer. The Taos School members whose works are on display at Galerie De Tours include E.I. Couese, Oscar E. Berninghaus and Leon Gaspard.

Duarte travels to Carmel for exhibit

When Dalva Duarte was a young barefoot Brazilian Indian girl, she realized she was born with a passion to paint. Her works will be on display Saturday, Nov. 19 at Winters' Gallery on Dolores Street near Sixth Avenue in Carmel.

Ms. Duarte will leave Paris to be honored at a reception from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at the gallery.

The galleries have not neglected the early California artists such as William Keith, Johnnevald and J. Francis Murphy.

Also, popular-priced florals by Dorothy Spangler are available in a variety of sizes and colors, to add a light and cheerful tone to any room.

A variety of sculpture is also on display, ranging from Remington and Russell to the contemporary works of Robert Russin.

She discovered another world outside of her humble village through the writings of Hesse, Dostoevsky, Camus and George Amado in the school library.

With unusual determination for a young lady in a male oriented society, Ms. Duarte lived her dreams, defied her heritage and attended the University in Brazilia. She then moved to Europe where she studied the Masters at the Prado in Madrid and the Louvre in Paris.

She lived in Europe for 12 years. During that time her paintings have evolved into bold yet sensitive expressions of her life, her follies and her dreams. Her images range from the soft, tender impressionist watercolors of light filtering into green gardens, to magical moments of long pensive walks on white sandy beaches, to the vibrant colors of swirling carnival dancers.

Her paintings have been shown in several major galleries in France and Brazil and most recently she was recognized by the Minister of Culture of Brazil.

Hanson Galleries opens new display

TO CELEBRATE Hanson Galleries' first anniversary in Carmel, the exhibition Joan Miro—50 Years of Graphics will open with a reception from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 18 at the gallery on Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street in Carmel.

Gallery director Linda Jones said this is a major retrospective of Miro's graphics. The retrospective covers his works from the 1930s to the 1980s.

"Miro, who resides in Palma de Majorca, Spain, is nearing the end of his career as a graphic artist. He is painting very little these days," Ms. Jones said.

According to Abram Lerner, director of the Hirshhorn Museum in New York, "Miro's place is alongside the most fertile of those giants — Picasso and Matisse."

There is an interesting parallel in the careers of Miro and Picasso. Both are Spanish, or more precisely, Catalan from Catalonia and both grew up in Barcelona. Their mothers were friends and both sought out the great melting pot of 20th Century artistic movement, Paris, to fuel their respective fires of genius.

While Miro's work is not formally categorized as is Picasso's with its Blue, Rose and Cubist periods, he did find his niche as a surrealist. Miro is considered a master of abstract surrealism.

Miro, as did Picasso, enjoys the discovery of the unexpected and the objet trouve. When one walks through Barcelona with him, Miro is equally fascinated by the cathedral by Gaudi as he is with a peddler's wagon gaily festooned with garlands of red peppers.

As with Picasso, the greatest gift one could bring either would be an interesting old cog or machine part — later to be transformed into a great sculptural achievement or a playful toy.

Miro would take a tiny canvas and fill it with innumerable objects: dogs, trees and horses. Later, he would cover a massive painting with a delicate field of pure color, add a gesture — like the tail of a kite, a circle or triangle — and that would be it.

The techniques of color did not engross him until 1950 when, over the next few years, he created several dozen works of great charm, delicacy and contagious joyfulness.

Considered one of the masterpieces of the lithographic arts, the series Ubu Roi, or King Ubu, is a suite of 13 works to a text by surrealist writer Alfred Jarry. It was published in 1966 by Teriade and printed by Mourlot.

Miro's first etching, Daphnis et Chloe, was done in 1933 and published also by Teriade. He did not resume etching until 1938, when he was persuaded by Pierre Loeb and Pierre Matisse to do nearly 20 etchings and drypoints for them.

His graphic work, particularly in the field of aquatint, the tonal process which imparts a watercolor-like effect to etchings, underwent an abrupt change after a trip to Japan in the mid 60s.

He was so inspired with Oriental calligraphy that he created a series of aquatints imbued with that same elegant monumentality and timeless simplicity. It formed the nucleus of the showing given him at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, curated by Riva Castleman.

Works such as the 1967 L'Astre du Marecage and L'Astre du Labyrinthe (the first aquatint catalogued as employing the embossing effects of carborundum, a technique which allows Miro to paint onto a metal plate with a viscous liquid which hardens to become an embossing surface) through the 1968 Le Grand Sorcier and Le Samourai, became a part of the annals of modern graphic masterworks throughout the important exhibition.

The Hanson Galleries also includes modern paintings, rare prints, sculpture and tapestries. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. For more information, phone 625-3111.

SUMMER NIGHT, BERGEN, is the title of this pastel which is one of 20 new pastels of Scandinavian scenes by DeWitt Whistler Jayne in his solo show at the New Masters Gallery, on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln Streets in Carmel. The exhibition will open with a reception for the artist from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at the gallery. The public is invited to attend.

'Pastels of Scandinavia' at New Masters Gallery

THE PASTELS of Scandinavia, a show of new works by DeWitt Whistler Jayne, will open with a public reception for the artist from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at the New Masters Gallery on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln streets in Carmel.

His pastels of Norway, Sweden and Denmark will be on exhibit through December.

The artist, who works in both oil and pastel, has created works of Big Sur, Monterey Bay, Java, the Fiji Islands, Tahiti and the U.S. Virgin Islands. In these new works he has illuminated the grandeur of the fjords and mountains of Scandinavia and the charm of its cities.

Gallery owner William F. Hill said: "Even more than watercolor, pastel has been felt to be dainty."

During the 18th Century, the powdery, feminine tints of pastel were compatible with the decor, costume and coiffures of that period. Pastel artist Edgar Degas lifted pastel from its airy effects to a major place among the media.

His pastels show powerful drawing in firm, decisive strokes. He juxtaposed one color at full intensity with another to enhance the strength of both. It is also the way Jayne paints his works.

In his new Pastels of Scandinavia, Jayne shows the harbor of Sweden's majestic port city, Goteberg; the Swedish capital, Stockholm, with its lights shimmering at twilight; a quiet evening in Nordland, the narrow strip of land between Sweden and the Norwegian Sea, cut through sheer-walled fjords; a summer night in Bergen, the 900 year old city surrounded by seven mountains, the evening sky glowing softly with the delicate shades of a twilight that lasts 22 hours a day during July and August; the Vestfjorden fjord; the misty Lofoten 600-island group within the Arctic Circle; Tromso, chief city of Arctic Norway with its herring fisheries and the "midnight sun" of the Barents Sea, north of Norway and European Russia.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information, phone 625-1511.

A STRANGE WALK is the title of this painting by Italian artist Lucio Sollazzi which will be part of an exhibition of his works at Zantman Art Galleries, on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street in Carmel.

Sollazzi works on exhibit

PAINTER Lucio Sollazzi will leave his hometown of Pavia, Italy to attend a reception Saturday at the Zantman Art Galleries, on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street, Carmel.

An exhibition of his works opens with a reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19. The public is invited.

Sollazzi is best known for his use of light and shadow in effects that one Italian critic has called "explosive."

He chooses as his subject small towns of the Mediterranean, Spain and Sicily with the rich textures of ancient buildings, walls and ruins that reflect a luminous golden light when struck by rays of the sun.

The immediate foregrounds of his paintings are almost always cast in shadow—a traditional device that leads the viewer's eyes "into" the painting toward the brilliant contrast of light and dark beyond.

Often human figures appear in his compositions: Franciscan monks in brown habits, clerics and altar boys in red and white and field workers in garments the color of the earth. These people bring more life to his scenes. The illusion of motion is often suggested by the way in which he renders fabrics and foliage caught in a breeze.

The paintings in the collection on exhibit comprise Sollazzi's third one-man show at Zantman Art Galleries. The exhibition will continue through Dec. 1. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday. For more information, phone 624-8314.

'Elegance through simplicity'

I THINK OF myself as a creative cook, party planner and a dinner menu coordinator. It is an exciting experience for me to select table settings, linens, flowers and candles to complement individual themes. I believe in "elegance through simplicity." My heritage is French-Italian and I often combine the two cuisines, giving superb results. My current excitement is finding inspiration through Pam Aronson, a new caterer on the peninsula. I'm looking forward to future culinary possibilities with her. My hope is that my true love for the art of cooking and serving will be evident, pleasing to your eye, your palate and your heart." I am available for consultations, private or group cooking classes and catering. You can call me at 625-2397. Tastefully yours, from the kitchen of JoAnn Megna.

A warm punch richly flavored with fruits, spices and nuts makes a cozy treat for guests on a blustery winter's night. The recipe below for Wine Wassail, taken from Trim a Treat (Irena Chalme's Cookbooks) by Sylvia Schur, with its roasted clove-studded apples on top was the original toasting brew in old England.

DILLED SALMON STEAKS

4 fresh or frozen salmon steaks
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon dried dill weed
Place salmon in a baking dish; sprinkle with butter, salt and pepper. Bake uncovered at 350° for 20 minutes. Remove salmon from oven and spread sour cream over the top. Sprinkle with lemon peel and dill. Bake three minutes longer.
(Recipe from The Carmel Wet Fish Market.)

CHEESE SAUCED HALIBUT

2 pounds halibut
¼ cup margarine
¼ cup flour
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
Dash pepper

Dash paprika
Place fish in baking dish. In saucepan melt butter, blend in flour, garlic salt, pepper. Add milk and wine. Cook and stir until thick and bubbly. Stir in 1 tablespoon parmesan cheese. ### PEPPARNOTTER (Swedish Peppernuts)

- ½ pound butter
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup heavy cream
- 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon cardamom
- 1 teaspoon white pepper

Cream the butter and sugar thoroughly. Gradually stir in the cream.

Sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, cinnamon, cardamom, and pepper. Add to the butter mixture. Mix together with your fingertips until you have a soft dough that sticks together. Chill the dough 15 minutes.

Form the dough into small balls, about the size of marbles.

Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet at 350° for 18 to 20 minutes, or until firm and lightly browned.

Makes about 10 dozen.

Note: These cookies are peppery when first baked. Store in a tightly covered container at least two weeks to mellow.

KONJAKSKRANSAR (Swedish Cognac Rings)

- 3 cups sifted cake flour
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ pound sweet butter
- 3 tablespoons cognac (approx.)

Sift the flour, sugar, and salt into a bowl. Cut in the butter until the mixture resembles coarse meal. Sprinkle the cognac over the mixture, a tablespoon at a time, mixing with a fork until the mixture holds together, adding additional cognac if necessary. Press the dough together to form a ball. Chill the dough until it can be handled easily.

Pinch off a piece of the dough, using about a rounded teaspoonful. Roll out with your hands on an unfloured surface into pencil-like strips about 8 inches long. Pull the ends together, side by side, then twist the two together like twine. Shape into a ring, pinching the ends securely. Place on an ungreased baking sheet, about an inch apart.

Bake in a 375° oven for 5 to 7 minutes, or until set. They should remain white. Makes about 6 dozen.

SWEDISH RYE COOKIES (Ragkakor)

- 1½ cups unsalted butter
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1½ cups rye flour
- 1½ cups wheat flour
- Pinch of salt

Cream butter with sugar until light and fluffy. Sift flours together with salt and add gradually to butter, blending well between additions. Wrap in waxed paper and chill 1 hour. Divide dough in four parts and roll out one at a time, leaving other pieces in the refrigerator until you are ready for them. Roll out to paper thinness on a lightly floured board and cut with 2½-inch round cookie cutters. Arrange on buttered cookie sheets. Using a thimble, cut a small hole off to one side of each cookie. Pierce surface of cookies with the tines of a fork. Bake in preheated 350° oven for about 10 minutes, or until golden yellow. Cool on sheet and store in airtight container.

Makes about 5 dozen cookies.

POTTED PEPPER DIP

- 4 large sweet red or green peppers
- 1 small onion, cut up
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons cooking oil
- Salt to taste
- ½ teaspoon prepared horseradish (optional)
- Dash pepper
- ¾ cup plain yogurt
- ½ of an 8-ounce package Neufachtel cheese, softened
- Few dashes hot pepper sauce

Quarter peppers lengthwise; remove stem and seeds. Place peppers, peel side up, on baking sheet. Broil 2 to 3 inches from heat for 4 to 5 minutes or until peppers are charred. Cool, then peel peppers.

In blender container or food processor bowl place about ½ of the peppers, the onion, lemon juice, oil, salt, horseradish and pepper. Cover and blend until smooth, add another ½ of the peppers to mixture in blender until smooth. Repeat with remaining peppers. Transfer mixture to a bowl. Cover and let stand at room temperature for 2 hours.

Sieve pepper mixture, pressing gently to drain off excess liquid. In mixing bowl combine yogurt, cheese, and hot pepper sauce. Stir in sieved pepper mixture. Cover; chill (may be prepared a day ahead). If desired, spoon into hollow pepper shells; keep 1 shell while serving another. Serve with vegetable dippers. Makes 2½ cups.

(Recipe from "Garden Fresh Cooking" by Sharron Smith.)

"GINGERBREAD HOUSES can be charmingly simple, or beautifully elaborate," say Whirlpool home economists. You can even make one to look like your own home, with little gingerbread figures to represent each family member. Let your creativity and imagination soar. It's a fun project for the whole family made easier and faster with a microwave oven.

SHRIMP-STUFFED PINEAPPLE

- 1 whole ripe pineapple
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- Stuffing:
- 3 cups small shrimp, cooked
- ½ cup water chestnuts, diced
- 1 can (5-oz. size) bamboo shoots
- 1 cup bean sprouts
- 1 sweet red pepper, diced
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce

Select firm, handsomely leafed pineapple; should be soft to the touch when pressed but not mushy. Hard pineapples generally ripen in kitchen window or in paper bag in five to six days (maximum).

Slice off top of pineapple about 1 inch down; save top for use as cover. With sharp knife, hollow out pineapple, discarding pulp and chopping fruit fine. Sprinkle inside of pineapple and pineapple cover with lemon juice to prevent discoloration.

Prepare stuffing: Mix together ½ the chopped pineapple (save rest for other use) and remaining ingredients listed under stuffing. Spoon into hollow pineapple and cover. Stand pineapple upright on plate and keep in refrigerator until serving time. Serve with shrimp-flavored crackers or rice crackers.

Note: For a cool summertime luncheon, or as a splendid addition to a buffet dinner, gently blend 4 cups cooked macaroni shells (small size) into shrimp mixture; slice pineapple in half, arrange halves on platter, and spoon shrimp-macaroni mixture over. Increase amount of mayonnaise to form moist salad. Makes 6-8 servings.

Fresh sandwiches are an alternative to junk food

Jemmy Twitcher's reputation is built on fresh generous sandwiches made every day and a large selection of vegetarian sandwiches in addition to the traditional meat varieties, using only the freshest and top quality ingredients in all our products. Our strongest form of advertising comes from our customers. We deliver every day to peninsula area health food, grocery and liquor stores, schools and the hospitals. Guaranteeing our sales ensures there's never any stale food on the shelves like the prepackaged plastic sandwiches that are on the market.

Every day at 5 a.m. Ron Mussat and a dependable staff of three begin making sandwiches in the rear of Bosso's Restaurant and Lounge at 685 Lighthouse Ave. in Monterey. The sandwiches and juices are then delivered by 11 a.m. just in time for the lunch crowd.

There's a demand and a need for delicious, and nutritious convenient food for the person who has to eat on the go, at their desk, or who's calorie conscious at affordable prices. Or that same person who is having a gathering and needs to feed that gathering without spending a minimum of an arm and a leg to do so. Jemmy Twitcher fills the void created by fast junk food and high priced haute cuisine catering.

Punch is a holiday tradition

Along with Christmas trees and candy canes, plum puddings and stockings stuffed to the brim, holiday punches are a traditional, seasonal favorite.

A brimming bowl of punch is a delicious way to welcome guests during this season of entertainment. A creamy, frothy eggnog is always a party tempter and, as it keeps well in the refrigerator, it's great to have on hand for an impromptu holiday get-together.

Punches are an especially good idea when having a party, for not only do they save wear and tear on the host and hostess, but on the budget as well.

Serving a party with punch is much less costly than stocking a bar for an assortment of mixed drinks.

A simple bowl trimmed with evergreens and filled with luscious drink is a delightful way to toast in celebration of the holiday.

Along with holiday dinner parties and festive open houses, informal moments such as decorating the three on Christmas Eve or warming bundled-up carollers by the fireside after a night of song are also times when enjoying a festive punch is the perfect way to enhance feelings of warmth and togetherness.

Warm punches, as well as cold, have become holiday favorites. In order to serve a cold punch at its best, keep it cold with an easy-to-make, decorative ice block. All that is needed is some fresh and candied fruit and water.

After arranging the fruit in the bottom of a ring mold, just add 1/2 inch of cold water and freeze, until fruit is secured in place, then add cold water to fill the mold and freeze solid.

Let the mold stand outside the freezer for 15 minutes before serving the punch. Along with the ingredients for the punch base, invert the ice block into the punch bowl. Then fill the bowl, stir gently and serve.

For those who prefer a non-alcoholic version of a warm and inviting drink, Hot and Merry Cranberry Punch.

THIS HOLIDAY season, try this sunny shop - it's genuinely fun and a haven for young models and college girls who don't have hours to spend on their hair. Highlighting here is superlative. #### RED PEPPER JELLY Poured over a block of cream cheese, a delicious and simple party trick. Serve in a pretty dish with your favorite crackers on the side.

2 1/2 pounds (about 7 large) red bell peppers
 2 cups cider vinegar
 2 teaspoons each salt and chili powder
 10 cups sugar
 3/4 cup lemon juice
 1 bottle (6 oz.) liquid pectin

Cut peppers in half; remove and discard stems and seeds. Cut peppers into pieces and whirl a few at a time in a blender or food processor until very finely chopped (you should have about 4 cups). In a large kettle combine pepper pulp and all the juices, the vinegar, salt, and chili powder. Over high heat bring to boiling and boil rapidly for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and stir in the sugar and lemon juice. Return pan to heat and bring back to boiling. Stir in the pectin and boil, stirring constantly, for exactly 1 minute. Reduce heat and skim off any foam; quickly ladle the boiling hot jelly into the hot, sterilized jars to within 1/8 inch of rim. Seal; store in cool place.

Polish ham for an elegant dinner

Everyone appreciates an elegant dinner, but one that is easy on the budget is truly a bonus...so, next time you entertain, think Polish ham.

There is absolutely no waste...no fat to trim, just solid ham...fine textured and the superior flavor that is the result of centuries of experience combined with the latest methods of curing and canning.

Polish canned ham is good anytime, any season. Keep it on hand in your refrigerator; it will last for at least six months unopened.

Polish ham is fully cooked and may be served many ways...so let your imagination run rampant.

Here are some of our entertaining ideas:

- A main dish holiday ham with a red currant jelly glaze and pitted black cherries served with buttered noodles and broccoli.

- For leftover ham why not try assorted melon wedges wrapped in ham slices and served with a lemon yogurt dressing.

- A delicious all-in-one luncheon treat is pita stuffed with ham and cheese slices, green peppers, mushrooms, tomatoes and alfalfa sprouts.

- Always a family favorite is our Polish ham shish kebabs...cubed ham, green peppers, small white onions, cherry tomatoes and served on a bed of rice pilaf.

GREEK STUFFED LEAVES

½ pound lean ground beef
¼ cup onion, either grated or finely minced

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons rice
1 tablespoon parsley, minced

1 tablespoon mint or dill, minced

½ cup chicken broth
About 24 leaves, Swiss chard, collard, beet greens, or cabbage leaves

Rinse the leaves well and remove the stems. Drain and dry. Melt the butter in a skillet and cook the onions five minutes. Remove from the heat and add the meat, rice and herbs. Blend thoroughly. Put one rounded teaspoon of the meat mixture on each leaf and roll up, tucking the ends under. If some leaves are small, put two together. At this point the bundles can be refrigerated and held until needed. Place the leaves tucked sides down into a skillet. Arrange them tightly against each other so they cannot unravel. Pour the broth over them. They should be almost covered with the liquid. Cover and simmer one hour. Carefully remove the stuffed leaves to a serving platter. Garnish with lemon wedges. Serves 4 to 6.

Voyage with Columbus during Explorama series movie here

EXPLORAMA, the travel-adventure film series, will present the new documentary film, Voyage of Columbus which will be narrated in person by its producer, Robin Williams at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17 and Friday, Nov. 18 with a 2 p.m. matinee on Friday in Sunset Center, Carmel.

Williams is well established as a film lecturer and his films are known for their photographic excellence. He is a master at telling a complete story with a camera.

Williams shot footage at Genoa, throughout Spain, the Canary Islands and the Bahamas for Voyage of Columbus. It was researched for four years before location filming began.

It moves from Genoa, Italy to Madrid to La Rabida, the monastery where Columbus arrived in Spain for the first time from Portugal. It follows Columbus to Granada where he received permission to make the voyage of discovery.

Williams takes the audience to Barcelona where there is a replica of the Santa Maria and to San Salvador in the Bahamas then the return to Spain where Columbus passes through the town of Trujillo where Pizarro lived (who later became the conqueror of Peru.)

The film will also show Sanlucar and Cadiz, the two ports where subsequent voyages to the new world were launched and back in Seville to see the Archives of the Indies and the cathedral with the tomb of Columbus.

Williams comes from a family traditionally known for its world-wide adventures. His grandfather lost his life on the Amazon River, his father wrote the best seller, The World Is My Oyster and he is descended from a long line of Welsh sea captains.

Williams was born in London but was raised in California. He became interested in acting while in college and became a principle member of the Laguna Playhouse. He later began to organize tours to Europe through his father who operated a travel agency.

He then became a director of international tours for two separate travel agencies and traveled extensively throughout Europe, the Middle East, Asia and the South Seas.

Later he studied cinematography at the Brooks Institute of Photography in Santa Barbara to record his travels. He learned to master the art of telling a story with a camera and is aided as a lecturer by his ability to narrate his films with an ease and intriguing clarity that captivates audiences.

Admission is $6.25 each and tickets will be available at the box office before each performance.

Thomas to read poetry at Cherry Foundation

The Poetic Drama Institute/Cherry Foundation Theatre Project will present poet Taelen Thomas at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17 and Friday, Nov. 18 in Cherry Hall, on Guadalupe Street and Fourth Avenue, Carmel.

The program, "Dance of Tongues" includes recent inventions and all new arrangements of old favorites. He recently toured rural schools with Max Ellison, renowned storyteller and oral poet.

Characterized as a poetic rhapsodist, Thomas performs an evening of his own poems and those of many other poets from memory which includes various languages such as ancient Greek, Jamaican, Hawaiian and others.

He performed Calls of the Common Loon at the Cherry Foundation last year and prior to that performance, Bones of October was presented.

A $3 donation will be requested at the door. For reservations or more information, phone 624-7491.
